GERMAN JEWS FEAR RETURN OF OLD BONDAGE

Vision Selves Thrust Back Into Ghetto.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1933: By The Chicago Tribune.]

FRANKFORT-AM-MAIN, Germany, March 26.—Back to the Ghetto—this and not the fear of Nazi blackjacks and guns is the secret dread which grips German Jewry today.

In Frankfort the Jews are in despair. These words invoke a more poignant meaning here than anywhere else. For this proud, princely merchant city, which gave to the world of international finance "the five gentlemen of Frankfort"—the Rothschilds—left its Ghetto behind in the middle ages.

Instead of slum tenements, Israel has placed its mark on this city in schools, universities, libraries, and banks. The principal Jewish quarter is a well aired, shady district with brownstone houses. It is no more like a medieval ghetto than Michigan avenue in Chicago.

Fear Hateful Restrictions.

The city is a setting for lives of freedom and power, but its 30,000 Jews see menacing them a return of the hateful restrictions, discriminations, and disenfranchisements of old. This is what the triumph of fourteen years of anti-Semitic propaganda by the Nazis and their predecessors means to the Jews of Frankfort—and for that matter to all Germany. It is the common and unanimous preoccupation of all their leaders with whom I talked, from big business men to scholars.

They shrug, expressing mingled contempt, amusement and sadness at the spectacle of American liberals working themselves into a frenzy over Nazi atrocities and pogroms, some real and some imaginary. The real atrocities don't get into the papers, my Frankfort friends insist—they are my friends even if they study my American passport as if it were a bogus yellowback and cross-examine me on my life and work before consenting even to listen to my questions.

"It would be less terrible for the Nazis to kill a few hundred of us outright than to make thousands of us exist without means of livelihood," one leader said.

Incidentally, this man comes from a family which has been German since the 15th century and holds the iron cross for bravery during the world war.

Worry Over Exaggerated Reports.

But there is more than amusement and contempt in the voices of these Jews when they speak of exaggerated reports of revolutionary violence appearing in some American newspapers. There is a grave note of worry.

Although German Jewry is living through the most systematic persecution known since the middle ages and has had a fair taste of physical violence, by its own account it has seen nothing, heard nothing, remembered nothing.

Its lips are sealed like the lips of a witness in an American gang murder case and for the same reasons. It has been told it is not healthy to squeal. An official Nazi organ a few days ago went so far as to warn Jews that they would be held responsible for everything the American press said about the German government.

Apologies Are Invented.

This threat was taken so seriously by many intelligent Jews that they not only are careful to say nothing against the government themselves but go out of their way to try to convince foreign newspaper men that the suffering has been exaggerated. Hearing well informed Jews trying to invent apologies for the new government is a shock at first. Sometimes their arguments are almost as pathetic as they are ingenious.

"After all it is not to be compared with what happened in Italy," one said. "Why, so far not a single home has been burned and only two Jewish boys have been killed. Besides, the troubles were never ordered by the government and it now has the situation well in hand."

While the exaggerated or even the accurate press reports of anti-Semitic violence for which authorities might decide to hold them responsible cause feelings of fear, the Jews are quaking in their boots at the agitation being carried on by their American brothers.

"For God's sake, tell all American Jews to go easy unless they want to get us all massacred," one exclaimed.

DIPLOMAT DIES WITH 2 CHILDREN AND HIS MOTHER

Capt. Christian Channing Gross, war veteran, and formerly in the United States diplomatic service in various European countries, whose difficulties with his divorced wife over a million dollar trust fund and the paternity of a child were aired in the courts of two continents, was killed yesterday in an automobile accident at Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

His mother, Mrs. Natalie Gross, and his two children, Peter, 12 years old, and Barbara, 10 years old, died with him. His father, Charles Gross, was seriously injured. The Grosses were on their way from Palm Beach to Miami when their car skidded off the federal highway north of Fort Lauderdale and overturned, crushing the occupants.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gross formerly were residents of the Hyde Park hotel in Chicago. Recently they moved to Detroit, after having lived here for many years.

Former Wife in France.

Capt. Gross joined his parents and children in Palm Beach a few days ago after a visit of several months in France. His former wife, now Mrs. Virginia Harrison de Zayas, the daughter of Francis Burton Harrison, once governor general of the Philippines, resides in Grenoble, France, with her daughter, Anna, the subject of the paternity litigation. The present husband of Mrs. de Zayas is Marius de Zayas, a Mexican dancer.

Capt. Gross was 37 years old. He was graduated from the University of Illinois in 1917. He later studied law in Paris. During the war he served with the American forces in France and Siberia, winning a number of decorations.

After the war he entered the diplomatic service. In Algiers in 1922 he met and married Miss Harrison, heiress through her mother to a portion of the wealth of the Crocker family of San Francisco.

Beginning of Court Battles.

In 1928 his wife sued for divorce in Paris. She declared she had settled a trust fund of almost $1,000,000 on her husband in a vain effort to hold his love.

Instead of a divorce a separate maintenance decree was entered under which Gross agreed to pay his wife $250,000 of the trust fund. Two years later he won a divorce before Judge Robert E. Gentzel in Chicago. Judge Gentzel held the Paris settlement illegal. In Paris Mrs. Gross won a court ruling holding the Chicago divorce decree illegal.

For several years the Grosses warred over the custody of the children. Actions were pending simultaneously in Paris, New York, and Chicago on that issue and the issue of the trust fund.

Paternity Battle Started.

In 1931 Gross started a court action in Chicago through Attorney Robert E. Cantwell Jr. in which he claimed to be the father of Anna, then 3 years old, whom he alleged he had never seen and of whose existence he said he had previously been unaware. He asked the courts to declare him the father of the child.

The wife through her attorneys declared the father of the child to be De Zayas. She said she had won a Paris divorce and married the dancer. Superior Judge Joseph B. David ruled in favor of Gross, but the Appellate court reversed the decision.

Later Gross brought an action in the federal court here to restrain his former wife from collecting $250,000 from the trust fund. The suit is still pending.

Sends Raw Gold to Pay Newspaper Subscription

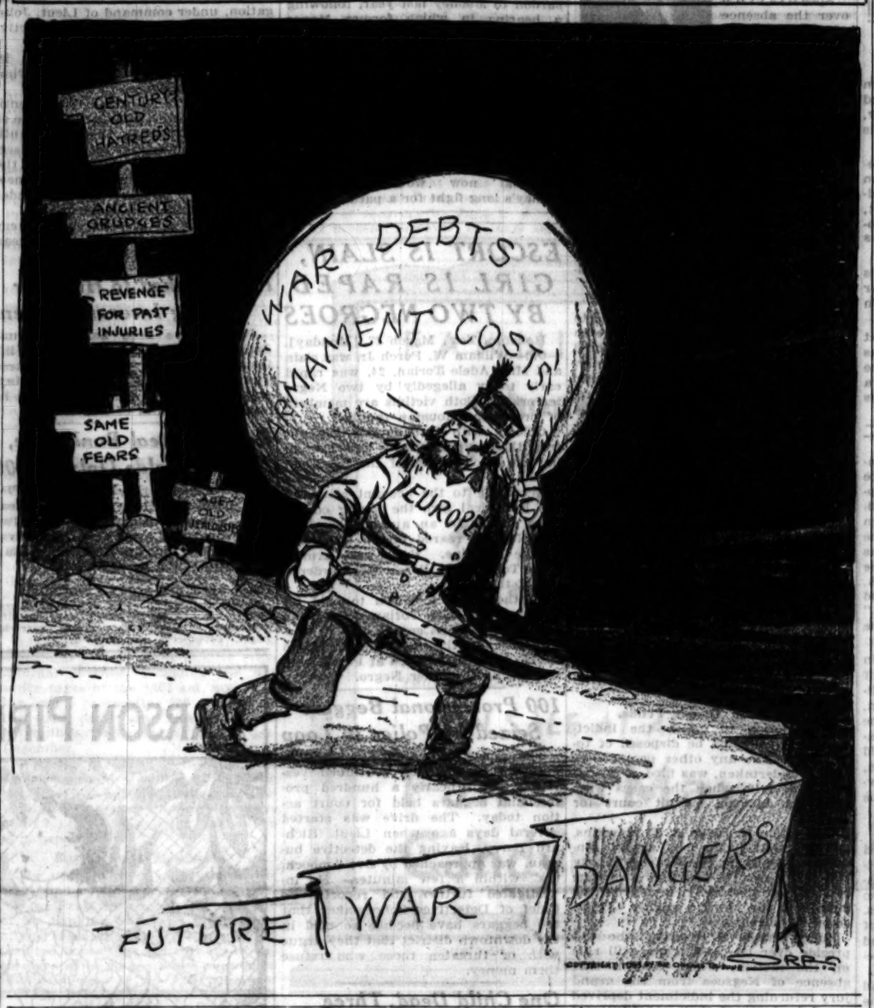
E. F. Gordon, of Elk City, Ida., mailed it in a match box. An accompanying letter read:

"I am sending you today two pennyweight strong of gold. This is assayer's residue melted down with a blowpipe, about 1,000 fine, worth a shade more than $2. I want my subscription continued for about two months."

ALWAYS LOOKING BACKWARD



Mother Goose Finds a Son in Old Adam

A $50 bill carried Adam Miller, 61 years old, 1659 South Harding avenue, through a house-that-Jack-built adventure yesterday morning and finally landed him in a snug police station cell.

At 11 o'clock Miller entered a Van Buren street haberdashery and purchased a derby. He offered a $50 bill in payment. The clerk, Howard Nelson, was unable to make change. Miller suggested they search for change. The clerk locked the store and they set out.

They hailed the cab of John Sutton. The $50 bill, Miller, Hatter Nelson, and Sutton cruised about without result. Miller said he was hungry and the party paused at the restaurant of Mrs. Louis Petrone, 855 West Grand avenue.

Miller "Buys" the Dinner.

Miller insisted the dinner was on him. After the meal he offered the $50 bill to Mrs. Petrone. She had no change, but thought she might get some from Charles Saletta, grocer at 904 West Grand avenue.

The $50 bill, Miller, Hatter Nelson, Driver Sutton, and Mrs. Petrone went to the grocery. Grocer Saletta had $30. Mrs. Petrone had $15. The cab driver had $2.85. The hatter had 85 cents.

Miller announced he could solve the problem of changing the bill because he had once figured out how long it would take a frog to get out of an 18 foot well if it climbed 3 feet and fell back 2 in 24 hours. He suggested that the grocer give him $30 for the $50 bill and that Mrs. Petrone pay $7.50 for the hat, $5 for the cab bill, give him (Miller) the remaining $2.50, and charge $5 for the meals. Miller explained that the grocer would then owe Mrs. Petrone $20.

Something Wrong Here.

The others were puzzled, but had no other plan to offer. Mrs. Petrone paid her money, Grocer Saletta turned over his $30, and Miller handed him a bill. Miller departed in the cab.

The grocer unfolded the bill and found it to be a two dollar bill. By hard running he leaped on the running board of the departing cab. Mrs. Petrone and Hatter Nelson followed on foot.

A few minutes later Miller, Hatter Nelson, Driver Sutton, Mrs. Petrone, and Grocer Saletta appeared before Lieut. James L. Devereux at the Racine avenue police station.

Miller was searched and $165 in small bills was found in his clothes, but no $50 bill. Then Devereux removed Miller's derby and the missing bill fluttered to the ground from its hiding place under his hat. Miller was charged with operating a confidence game.

SISTER HALTS ELOPEMENT OF YOUNG BEN BEHR

Some day, perhaps, Benjamin L. Behr Jr. of Lake Forest, former Oxford student, and Miss Mae June Riley of 999 Lake Shore drive might marry, but they didn't quite make it yesterday.

There was too much interference, it appeared, on the part of Benjamin's sister, Edith; his uncle, Otto W. Lehmann, 209 Lake Shore drive; Capt. James U. Sammis of the Lincoln park police, and Crown Point authorities.

Early in the day young Behr and Miss Riley left Chicago in the chauffeur driven Behr family car. Sister Edith, who made her debut in 1931, suspected Crown Point as their destination. She notified Uncle Otto. He notified Capt. Sammis. Capt. Sammis notified Crown Point. And in that city a marriage license clerk notified young Behr and Miss Riley that a "stop order" prevented issuance of a license. Moreover the would-be groom was too young, the clerk added. Behr said he would be 21 today.

The young couple returned to Chicago last night, avowing they'd marry some day. Miss Riley is 18 years old, a graduate of the Starrett school, and daughter of Mrs. H. L. Baumgardner of 999 Lake Shore drive, wife of a retired contractor. The parents of the boy are in Aiken, S. C. The elder Mr. Behr is well known as a sportsman.

SPRING WEATHER FILLS THE PARKS AND HIGHWAYS

Fine spring weather yesterday filled the parks with strollers and horseback riders and crowded the highways with automobiles. County highway police said the traffic was unusually heavy, but orderly, to the north, northwest, and west, and comparatively light to the south. The forecast for today calls for rather cool weather, with a possibility of light rain or snow. The Polar Bear club members took their last plunge of the winter season at the Edgewater Beach hotel.

14 Prisoners Flee Cells; Leave 'Room to Let' Signs

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LA PLATA, Argentina, March 26.—Fourteen convicts, including seven imprisoned for murder, walked out of the city jail today, entered waiting automobiles, and gained the open country before prison authorities could organize for pursuit. The prisoners left "Room to Let" notices in their cells.

Blasts Start Fire on Rialto; 100 Flee Cafe

A series of explosions shook the sixteen story Ashland block at the northeast corner of Clark and Randolph streets last night, damaged the kitchen of the Café De Alex, in the basement, and shot flames up a grease chute leading to the roof of the building. The total damage caused by the blasts and the fire that followed was estimated at $20,000, chiefly to the café and to offices on the fifth and sixteenth floors of the building.

Excitement swept the Rialto as frightened diners fled from the basement restaurant and fire apparatus clanged through loop streets to the scene. Hundreds of theatergoers gathered to watch the fire, and guests in the Hotel Sherman looked on from their windows across Clark street.

Blast Darkens Café.

The first blast, caused by the combustion of hot grease and dry dust, occurred in the lower portion of the grease chute, behind the kitchen of the Café De Alex. It extinguished lights in half the building, completely darkened the café and almost caused a panic among some 250 diners. A dozen chefs and assistants in the kitchen were showered with soot and debris.

Flame shot into the dining room, sending nearly 100 men and women in flight to the street. The fears of the other diners were quieted by Daniel Alexander, manager of the café, who passed among the tables after directing the orchestra to keep on playing. These guests departed later in orderly fashion.

Before firemen arrived several other blasts jarred the building. One at the fifth floor burst the wall which separated the grease chute and the offices of H. M. Byllesby & Co. Fire broke out there and the damage was heavy.

Other Offices Damaged.

The suite on the sixteenth floor, jointly occupied by C. W. Lampe & Co., architects, and the American Ironsmith, a trade journal, was also damaged.

Fire broke out sporadically in the chute. Firemen would find flames at the fifth floor level, then at the sixteenth, and again at the sixth. It required nearly two hours to put out these fires. Once the flames broke out in the attic above the sixteenth floor.

Marshal Anthony Durkin of the first fire division said his estimate of $20,000 damage might be increased by water damage to offices. The Ashland block contains the offices of many lawyers, politicians, and business concerns, as well as those of the Associated Press and City News bureau.

Illinois Needs Beer Revenue, Horner Stand

Gov. Henry Horner agreed yesterday with representatives of the city administration in their demands for home rule over post-Volstead beer—but with one reservation.

Upon his return from Washington in the morning, the governor was visited by a specially designated group of aldermen and other city officials who urged that the pending state legislation should not interfere with a complete restoration of the city's pre-Volstead rights over beer.

Upholds State's Tax Right.

The governor agreed with them except that he was firm in his declaration that the right to license dispensaries could not be, as it was in pre-war days, confined to the cities and local communities of the state.

He told his callers that there was nothing in the Ward beer bill pending in the assembly that would interfere with the city's power to regulate and license beer dealers, but that the state must take advantage of its own right to raise revenue by imposing license fees upon retailers as well as by a tax per gallon.

"The state needs the money," said the governor, "and imposition of state license fees will not interfere with the rights of Chicago or any other city to collect its own license fees."

Those at the conference with Gov. Horner were Acting Mayor Frank J. Corr, Aldermen John S. Clark, John Toman, Thomas Terrell, William A. Rowan and James B. Bowler; City Clerk Peter J. Brady and Harold Crotty of his staff, Chief Clerk George Lohman of the city collector's office, and State Senator Harold G. Ward, who is handling the regulatory bill.

Aldermen Go to Capital.

The aldermen who took part in the Horner conference took an evening train for Springfield where they expect to participate in subcommittee hearings during the next three days. Ald. Clark said they would protest the issuance of licenses by the state as a precedent which might lead to a more general practice of this sort.

He also protested that revenue that ordinarily would go into the city treasury would be diverted to state purposes if the proposal is carried out. And he argued that the state hasn't the police machinery required for the investigation of license applications, or for the supervision of licenses, for which, he said, the city is much better equipped.

Explains Acting Mayor Bill.

Shown a copy of a telegram from United States Senator Lewis protesting against any proposal to eliminate a primary in connection with the election of a successor to Mayor Cermak, Gov. Horner said that some misunderstanding apparently existed concerning pending proposals.

"There is no plan to waive the primary," he said. "The bill before the assembly doesn't even deal with the subject of the primary. It merely provides greater powers for the acting mayor—those powers to continue until an election can be held."

The governor returned to the city with P. A. Nash, Mayor Cermak's successor as Democratic national committeeman. Both insisted patronage had not been discussed with the administration chieftains in Washington. The governor returned to Springfield on a night train.

SEEK THEATER CZAR'S VERSION OF OSER DEATH

Union 'Rebels' Fear New Attacks.

Five ousted members of the motion picture operators' union and their friends gathered yesterday around the body of their slain comrade, Fred Oser, in an undertaking establishment at 3834 Irving Park boulevard. In low tones they asked each new arrival:

"Have they found Tom Maloy yet?"

The answer was always "No." Thomas E. Maloy, business agent of the union and by virtue of the power of that job regarded as the czar of the picture theater business locally, had not been found by police or the state's attorney's office.

Classed as Rebels.

The five ousted members in the undertaking parlor had been classed as rebels in Maloy's union along with Oser, who was killed Friday by two bullets fired into his body by Ralph O'Hara, union organizer and chief assistant to Maloy. The scene of the slaying was Maloy's luxurious private office in the union headquarters at 506 South Wabash avenue.

Maloy's heavy hand had meted out punishment to the rebels who had opposed his domination of the union. First the rebels, including Oser, had been fined $5,000 by the union. Later they were expelled. They had instituted court action and were fighting for the right to work at their occupation when Oser's death at the hands of O'Hara brought the union strike to a tragic climax.

Visitors Are Scrutinized.

Each visitor to the undertaking parlor was carefully scrutinized before being admitted. The widow and the six Oser children were there. They live at 5135 Roscoe street. After Oser had been denied work as an operator he tried to market a theater fire extinguisher invention, but had had trouble with his partner and the family is now destitute. Expulsion from the union caused the forfeiture of his $2,000 union death benefit.

The men who knew Oser and had taken sides with him against Maloy and O'Hara said they expect other serious consequences.

"Have they found Maloy yet?" they repeated.

It was reported last night that Maloy was preparing to surrender today for questioning, but this rumor was not confirmed. A telephone call to his home at 5806 Chappel avenue was answered by a woman who said she did not know where to reach him.

Want Maloy's Version.

At the detective bureau police were entertaining a theory that Maloy was present when Oser was slain in the union offices. O'Hara's story that Oser had drawn a pistol and fired the first shot was being carefully considered in view of the statements of Oser's companions and relatives that the victim never carried a pistol and that he went to Maloy's office that day in high hopes that the union czar would reinstate him.

The past of Maloy and O'Hara was being reviewed in connection with the theory that Maloy was present and may have fired the shots, O'Hara taking the blame.

Ownership of the gun which was found within two inches of the right hand of Oser after he had been shot was being traced. The course of each bullet fired—there were three according to O'Hara's story—was studied by Assistant State's Attorney Charles S. Dougherty. Oser was 5 feet 7 inches tall and weighed 112 pounds. O'Hara is over 6 feet tall and weighs 175 pounds.

Find Bullet in Wall.

O'Hara said Oser fired one shot at him. The bullet, according to O'Hara, whistled past his right ear and was found embedded in the north wall of Maloy's office, 8½ feet above the floor. One bullet hit Oser in the left armpit and then went into the wall at a height of about 4 feet from the floor. The other bullet passed through Oser's heart and broke a picture on the wall. The lead was found on a couch.

"Oser had been to a barber shop just before he went to Maloy's office," Prosecutor Dougherty said. "We want to find out the shop and also the barber who worked on him. We will ask the barbers and porters if they saw a gun on Oser or felt one in his pocket. Two other persons who had been with Oser before he went into the barber shop were sure he had no gun. Oser's brother-in-law helped him on with his overcoat twice during the noon hour. The overcoat had fallen to the floor. A gun in the pocket would have been

Yesterday as they talked in whispers at Oser's bier the "rebel" operators told Mr. Dougherty how they had accused Maloy and O'Hara of looting the union funds and of wreaking vengeance on all who opposed his absolute rule. They recalled the killing of another insurgent, Jacob Kauffman, who was shot to death in June, 1931.

Charges a "Sweet Deal."

"The officials of Local 110 [Maloy's union] have made another deal that will put some more money in their pockets," the letter read. "This sweet deal [having to do with an alleged agreement] will pay Maloy, Reynolds, [Thomas Reynolds, president of the union], and Quinn [Emmett Quinn, a union organizer] a nice piece of change.

"These racketeer officials framed honest, upright, courageous men out onto the street. These parasites have deprived women and children of their bread and butter. How much longer are you going to stand for this trio and their grafting ruination of our union?

"They have been, and are today, robbing our treasury and keeping non-members steadily employed on good jobs while members are either out of work or on low-paying swings. Does any of our officials earn ¼ of the salary he gets? The combined salaries amount to $100,000 a year. The dues amount to only $50,000. Where does the rest come from?"

The letter which was sent to all members of the union then went on to charge that the union officials take 10 per cent of the wages of permit men—those not holding membership cards in the union. Attached was a list of 95 permit men working at steady jobs in moving picture theaters in the city.

Negotiate New Wage Contract.

Maloy and the theater owners had been negotiating a new wage agreement. The present pay of operators range from $90 to $175 a week, it was explained, the sum not depending on the ability of the operator or on the amount of work done by him, but is determined by the number of seats in the theater. Theater owners said little skill is required and one can learn to operate a moving picture machine in twenty minutes. Many theater owners, it is charged, have been forced by Maloy to employ two operators where they say only one is needed.

Police yesterday recalled Maloy's attitude at other times when there has been trouble with theater owners and members of his own union. At such times they said Maloy had always been a tyrant. Two years ago the theater owners rebelled against Maloy's mandate that two operators must be employed by every theater whether the theater was able to pay them or not. Fifteen theaters were bombed in 1931 before the owners capitulated. They were:

RIDGE THEATER, 1550 Devon avenue, bombed Aug. 28.
MONROE THEATER, 57 West Monroe street, bombed Oct. 12.
COLONY THEATER, 3208 West 59th street, chemical bomb exploded Oct. 16 in the theater, burning Peter J. Mooney, 3357 South Emerald avenue, alleged to have been employed by Tom Maloy.
LINDY THEATER, 3437 Ogden avenue, bombed Oct. 16.

Besides the Colony theater, where a panic was caused when the chemical bomb exploded in Mooney's hand while a show was in progress, many theaters were forced to close because of stench bombs.

Theater Owners Give In.

Finally the theater owners said they could not combat the bombers and made peace with Maloy, police recalled. Immediately the bombings ceased.

While the strike was in progress, a Cook county grand jury indicted Maloy, O'Hara and other officials of the union and Maloy's brother, Joseph Maloy, city examiner of motion picture operators, on charges of conspiracy. The state's attorney's office charged that Joseph Maloy so manipulated his office that only those applicants for operators' licenses sent him by his brother Tom could pass the examinations. In this way, it was charged, Tom Maloy controlled the supply of men for that kind of work, and as dictator of the union, he could allow any one to work on a "permit" even though bona fide members of the union were unable to get employment.

Maloy also wielded great power in the underworld, the prosecutor's staff charged. They declared he had alliances with Capone, Saltis, Bugs Moran, and the other gang chieftains of the city. They said Maloy, a shrewd manipulator, fearing the gangsters would attempt to seize control of his union, appeased the chief gangsters by giving them moving picture operator jobs for some of their henchmen.

Indictments Are Dismissed.

After the theater owners had agreed to Maloy's peace terms the indictments were dismissed, the explanation being that witnesses would no longer testify against the defendants. It was after the alleged exposé of some of Maloy's tactics that Oser and a number of others began a movement to defeat Maloy for reëlection.

A previous opponent of Maloy had been Henry Gusenberg. When the Moran gang was in power on the north side it was said Maloy furnished operators' license cards to the Gusenberg brothers, including Peter and Frank, who were killed in the Valentine day massacre in 1929.

The Oser group filed a series of charges against Maloy and the other officials. They sought the assistance of the national president of their organization and more recently of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. For this they were punished by being fined $5,000 and then expelled from the union. They sought the aid of the courts and after being ruled out of the federal court filed a petition in the Superior court.

Last week they were seeking to raise funds to have a hearing on their petition which is pending before Judge William J. Lindsey.

Warren, O., March 26.—(AP)—Fifteen year old Peter Myers Jr., kidnaped March 18 from his home in Masury, near here, was returned safely to his father early today.

The boy's father received a telephone call last night to meet a man in Youngstown, Sheriff Roy S. Hardman said. Keeping the appointment, Myers was driven in his own automobile outside the city. Then he was blindfolded.

Other men joined Myers and his companion later. They drove for hours, the blindfolded man uncertain of the directions.

Finally another automobile met them, bringing the boy, who also was blindfolded. There was a halt in the darkness along a lonely road, and a moment later the boy was safe in his father's arms again.

STATE WITNESS IN SCOTTSBORO CASE IS MISSING

Negroes Face New Trial on Rape Charge.

Decatur, Ala., March 26.—(AP)—Disappearance of one of the state's principal witnesses cast some doubt here tonight on the probable course to be followed tomorrow when seven Negroes indicted in the "Scottsboro rape case" are to go on trial for the second time.

JUDGE HORTON.
[Acme Photo.]

Speculation over the absence of Ruby Bates, one of the two alleged victims aboard a Southern railway freight train on March 25, 1931, overshadowed a pending motion to quash the indictments.

The girl, who also is the alleged author of a letter repudiating her testimony in the first trials two years ago, has been missing from her home in Huntsville, Ala., since Feb. 27, and officers thus far have been unable to find a trace of her.

Mrs. Mary Bates told officers she believed her daughter had been kidnaped.

Delivered to Attorneys.

The letter the Bates girl is alleged to have written and which she swore in an affidavit was false, was delivered to attorneys employed by the International Labor Defense at Birmingham recently when efforts to gain the release of Roy Wright, one of the Negroes named in the original indictment, on a habeas corpus writ failed.

In this letter, addressed to Earl Streetman, the girl purportedly denied that the attacks took place and that she was forced to "swear a lie" by officers.

The day following its discovery on the person of Miron Pearlman, a pugilist who fought under the name of Danny Dundee, both Pearlman and the girl signed affidavits setting forth that the letter was written when the girl "was so drunk she did not know what she was doing."

Meanwhile, Victoria Price, other alleged victim, has repeatedly asserted that her testimony in the first trial was true.

Motion to Quash Pends.

The motion to quash the indictments, which must be disposed of tomorrow before any other proceedings can be undertaken, was filed at Scottsboro March 6, when the cases were called in Jackson Circuit court for retrial.

The action of Judge A. E. Hawkins, original trial judge who passed sentence of death on the Negroes nearly two years ago, in granting a change of venue automatically transferred the motion to the Morgan county Circuit court for disposition.

Judge James H. Horton, who will preside over the new trials, will rule on the motion, which alleges that absence of Negroes from the grand jury returning the indictment deprived the defendants of their constitutional rights.

Approximately 35 witnesses have been called for the trials which may last for a week or ten days, depending on whether the state elects to try the seven Negroes at one time or to sever the cases.

The Negroes are Andy Wright, 19, and Haywood Patterson, 19, both of Chattanooga; Willie Roberson, Columbus, Ga.; Olen Montgomery, 19, Monroe, Ga.; Charlie Weens, 22, and Ozie Powell, 18, both of Atlanta, and Clarence Norris, 22, Chattanooga. Their death sentences were set aside by the United States Supreme court which ordered the new trials.

PROSECUTOR AWAITS OFFICIAL WORD ON NEW MOONEY TRIAL

San Francisco, Cal., March 26.—(AP)—U. S. Webb, state's attorney general, today awaited official notification of the granting of a new trial to Thomas J. Mooney before beginning the mapping of plans for prosecution of the convicted preparedness day bomber.

Mooney, who was convicted of murder following the 1916 bombing which killed ten and injured 40 persons, won yesterday the right to be tried April 26 on an unused murder indictment.

A decision by Superior Judge Louis H. Ward gave him the trial. Mooney has been in San Quentin 16 years.

"Until the matter is brought officially before me I will have nothing to say," Webb said. "All I know of the matter is what I have read in the morning papers."

Judge Ward's decision was followed by withdrawal from prosecution on the old indictment of District Attorney Matthew A. Brady, and the designation by the court of the state attorney general's office to handle the coming trial.

Gov. James Rolph Jr., who denied a pardon to Mooney last year, following a hearing in which former Mayor James J. Walker of New York represented the prisoner, was not available for comment.

Brady, in withdrawing from the case, asserted "Such a make-believe trial" would not benefit Mooney, and that even acquittal would leave his status unchanged.

ESCORT IS SLAIN, GIRL IS RAPED BY TWO NEGROES

Houston, Tex., March 27 [Monday].—(AP)—William W. Porch Jr. was slain and Miss Adele Torian, 24, was raped early today allegedly by two Negro terrorists. Both victims are members of prominent Houston families.

Officers with bloodhounds brought from the city prison farm were searching the thick woods of the neighborhood.

According to the account given by the hysterical girl, the young couple were sitting in an automobile when the Negroes reared up on each side of the machine. Both were armed. Miss Torian and Porch were ordered out of the car.

"I thought I told you to hold up your hands," Miss Torian quoted one of the Negroes as saying.

Almost at the instant the Negro spoke, she said, he fired at Porch, who was facing the other Negro.

100 Professional Beggars Seized by Police in Loop

The police campaign against panhandlers in the loop continued yesterday, with nearly a hundred professional beggars held for court action today. The drive was started several days ago when Lieut. Richard Barry, leaving the detective bureau, was approached by five "moochers" within a few minutes. He investigated further and reported to Chief of Detectives Schoemaker that the beggars have become so bold in the downtown district that they argue with or threaten those who refuse them money.

One Child Dead, Three Ill of Food Poisoning

One child of John Tratasetta, 4925 South Dearborn street, was dead yesterday and three others were under treatment in the county hospital for food poisoning. James Tratasetta, 9 years old, was taken ill four days ago and died Saturday. Yesterday Tony, 7 years old, and Dorothy, 12, who were admitted to the hospital Saturday were reported in a serious condition. Later Dorothy, 2 years old, was taken to the hospital. Another child Conrad, 16 years old, is ill at home, but six other children in the family suffered no ill effects.

CO-ORDINATE CITY DETECTIVES IN FOUR SECTIONS

Bureau Reorganized After Year's Study.

A reorganization of the detective bureau under which all of the scattered details and squads are coördinated in four section, became effective at midnight last night.

The reorganization was recommended by Bruce Smith, New York police expert, who has been conducting a survey of the Chicago department for the last year. It will involve no changes in personnel except within the detective bureau.

The first of the four sections is that of the zone squads, thirteen in number. This section will include the bureau lockups and ballistics detail.

The second division, that of investigation, under command of Lieut. John McGinnis, will include the major activities of the detective force.

Lieut. John Cartan is to be in charge of the third division, on criminal correspondence.

Emmett Evans, acting chief identification inspector, remains in charge of the fourth division, that of identification. The special intelligence section known as Scotland Yard is the only unit not included in the new scheme. It remains directly under Chief of Detectives Schoemaker.

ROBIN INTERRUPTS HIS SHADOW BOXING TO LICK A BLUEJAY

Kansas City, March 26.—(AP)—Kansas City's window battling cock robin desisted long enough today to chase an invading bluejay from the H. E. Songer lawn, then resumed his intermittent 17 day warfare with his own image.

Mrs. Robin spent a half hour in the society of the warrior today, seemingly in an effort to entice him from the glittering windows.

Mrs. Songer, whose windows, for more than two weeks, have withstood the fluttering charge of the robin, believes he is beginning to realize the hopelessness of the affair.

After considering many suggestions to end the struggle, she announced she had decided to let cock robin work out his own destiny. She said officials of the Kansas City Humane society had agreed that was best.

"Today he seemed more curious than angry at his reflection," she explained. "I believe he'll soon realize his predicament, his mate will nest, and the proud papa will busy himself with paternal activities."

FEDERAL GRANT RELIEF BILL TO BE FILED TODAY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 26.—[Special.]—Federal grant relief would be provided under the terms of a half billion dollar relief bill to be introduced in the senate tomorrow by three senators, Robert F. Wagner of New York, Edward P. Costigan of Colorado, and Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin.

The bill makes provision under which an immediate additional loan could be made to Illinois to tide that state over its relief emergency.

The bill, which is said to represent President Roosevelt's ideas, provides that the huge sum shall be given outright to such states as shall apply for aid, and places the responsibility for seeing that the money is given wisely in the hands of a "federal relief administrator."

R. F. C. Powers Cut.

The Reconstruction Finance corporation is given authority, under the bill, to borrow the 500 million dollars but will have no powers beyond turning the money over to the relief administrator. Ten days after the appointment of the relief executive the Reconstruction Finance corporation would cease to have any control over the granting of loans to states or municipalities for relief purposes, and thus all of the government's relief financing would be under the one jurisdiction.

Reports have gone about the capital that in a short time President Roosevelt will ask congress to close up the Reconstruction Finance corporation entirely, turning all its commercial activities, including the liquidation of old loans and the granting of new ones over to the treasury department.

Under the terms of the new Wagner-Costigan-La Follette relief bill 200 million dollars would be set aside for grants to any state, upon application, the grants to equal one-third of an amount which the state has spent in a three months' period prior to the application.

Plan to Encourage States.

Senator Wagner said today that this provision was intended to encourage the states to provide adequate funds for the relief of suffering among the idle. If the bill is passed with this provision included, the more a state spends for relief the more it can collect from the government.

The New York senator declared that some opposition to such a provision, under which states which are in excellent financial position may get additional money from the federal government, had developed, but he thought the incentive a good one.

The remaining 300 million dollars would be available to the relief administrator to make additional grants to any state which requires further assistance.

"The federal relief administrator would also be authorized," said Senator Wagner, "to make grants to the states for the care of transients and to aid cooperative, self-help associations for the barter of goods and services."

Would Remove Limit.

The section of the bill under which Illinois would be permitted to borrow an additional sum immediately provides for the lifting of the borrowing limit of $45,000,000 which had been put on the states seeking loans from the R. F. C. Illinois has practically exhausted the full amount, but if the present bill is passed will be enabled to borrow sufficient funds to tide the state over until the grants are made available. Gov. Horner notified Senator Wagner and President Roosevelt that the state's relief funds would be exhausted by April 1, and that it was essential that additional federal credit be extended by that time.

Senator Wagner said today that he will seek to have the bill rushed through congress this week, but he conceded the possibility that it may be delayed until the following week. The senator hopes to have the senate committee on banking and currency report the measure out Tuesday, and he believes the bill can be passed the same day. He thought the house committee would consider the bill in similar rapid fashion, thus sending it to the President by Friday or Saturday. If it is delayed until next week Senator Wagner said the Illinois authorities would be compelled to ask the creditors of the relief organization there to carry on for several days.

Sees U. S. Aid Necessary.

"The bill recognizes," said Mr. Wagner, "that not only must starvation be prevented, but that standards of relief must be lifted if the growing generation is not to inherit all of the disastrous legacies of undernourishment and demoralization."

PITTSBURGH MAYOR MAY RESIGN IN MOVE TO AVOID JAIL TERM

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 26.—(AP)—Caught in a maelstrom of a civic scandal, Pittsburgh's beau brummel mayor, Charles H. Kline, nears the end of the official road.

Under sentence of six months for malfeasance in office, the 62 year old mayor is expected by his friends to resign this week in an effort to evade jail.

His attorneys pleaded that he is so ill that imprisonment probably would cause his death.

District Attorney Andrew T. Park appointed three physicians to examine the mayor. They reported that he is too sick to go to jail.

The district attorney and Kline's counsel will go to Philadelphia Monday and present the physician's report to Judge Thomas D. Finletter, who sentenced the mayor.

The judge then is expected to rule on the mayor's plea that the sentence be thrown out, provided he resigns from office.

The mayor was convicted nearly a year ago. He was accused of letting city contracts illegally. Several hundred thousand dollars was involved.

The mayor's former purchasing agent, Bertram L. Succop, a former army colonel, also was convicted and now is serving a year in jail.

The body of Frank Interlande, 33 years old, well to do operator of two loop beauty parlors, was found in a ditch beside Stony Island avenue, south of 154th street, yesterday. He had been shot once through the head and apparently was the victim of a gangland ride.

Efforts of racketeers to organize the beauty parlor business may have furnished a motive for the slaying, Homewood county highway police theorize. Another theory was that he was a victim of extortioners.

Employs Fifty Women.

The man's sister, Miss Mary Interlande, with whom he lived at 5322 Parker avenue, said she left him at his shop at 39 South State street Saturday evening, when he told her he was going out with friends, but would be home early. Interlande also operated a shop in the Stevens building, which his sister managed. She said his earnings had averaged about $10,000 a year for five years and that he had employed about 50 woman operators.

Miss Interlande also revealed that her brother had planned to leave for Italy in a few days to be married. They came from Sicily nine years ago.

Police last night were seeking Albert Peluso of Cicero, a barber employed in the shop and a friend of Interlande, in the hope that he could give them a clew to the identity of the dead man's companions on the night of the killing. Miss Interlande said that as he left the shop her brother told her Peluso would know his whereabouts.

May Quiz Women Patrons.

The police also found a long list of women patrons of the shops who may be called in for questioning.

Sergt. John Treacy of the bombing squad recalled that two weeks ago there were complaints that "Dynamite Pete" Cuniff, former labor racketeer and notorious bomber, was again attempting to organize the beauty parlors. A scheme of Cuniff's to get control of the industry two years ago was thwarted by the state's attorney's office.

ROOSEVELT SEES HOPE OF BUDGET BALANCE FADING

Revenue Yields Falling Further.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 26.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt's confidence that the economies he is effecting combined with the revenue from the beer tax would balance the federal budget in the next fiscal year has been considerably dampened, it was learned today.

Although it is calculated that the Roosevelt economy program will reduce the cost of the federal government close to 700 million dollars a year and that the beer tax will yield 150 millions, the treasury has reported to the President that the revenue from income and other taxes is falling far short of expectations.

Relief Grants Mounting.

Even if tax revenue were measuring up to estimates, an actual balancing of the budget would be out of the question, in view of the prospective additional 500 million dollar grant to the states from the federal treasury for relief of the idle and the 200 million outlay on reforestation and conservation to increase employment.

These two new expenditures alone aggregate 700 millions, offsetting the President's contemplated economies and leaving the budget still unbalanced to the extent of a billion dollars or more.

To escape from this embarrassment the administration purposes to eliminate all depression relief items from budget balancing calculations on the ground that they are abnormal expenditures and to endeavor to bring normal expenditures within current revenue. But even on this basis there now appears grave doubt of a balancing of the budget in the coming fiscal year.

Tax Yields Diminish.

Tax yields are falling short of estimates because of the continued prostration of business. In spite of the enormous increase of income tax rates the revenue from individuals and corporations for 1932 is only a few millions above that for the previous year. The income tax returns for 1932 bear eloquent evidence of the drying up of this source of federal revenue. Losses instead of profits are written large on the face of returns.

Likewise, because of the failure of a business revival to materialize, other internal revenue, including the nuisance taxes of the 1932 act, are yielding only a prospective $00 millions for the next fiscal year instead of the 981 millions estimated as late as last December.

With the balancing of the budget so dependent upon a revival of business, the President and his advisers are devoting thoughts continuously to ways and means of stimulating the return of prosperity.

Early Hopes Shattered.

The upward spurt of prices on the stock and commodity markets following the President's masterful handling of the banking crisis and the passage of the 500 million dollar economy act inspired hopes that the turning of the corner was at hand—hopes that have been dissipated by the later slump of the markets to even lower levels than before in many cases.

Some of the President's advisers think that controlled inflation should be resorted to for the purpose of raising prices and thereby increasing the purchasing power of farmers and other producers. Mr. Roosevelt looks for a vast increase in purchasing power of the farmers to flow from his farm relief bill to boost farm product prices artificially and from his forthcoming measure to refinance farm mortgages. Administration leaders are saying that these measures, if enacted, will bring perceptible evidence of recovery by June 1.

At present, however, the only signs of revived business are those attendant upon the restoration of beer. Brewing and affiliated industries are employing a constantly increasing number of workers and buying large quantities of agricultural and manufactured products. Altogether a 400 million dollar industrial expansion due to the return of beer is under way.

Latest Revenue Estimates.

Prospective government revenue for the 1934 fiscal year, according to the latest treasury estimates, follows:

From income taxes	$1,010,000,000
From internal revenue	800,000,000
From customs	320,000,000
From miscellaneous revenue	150,000,000
From beer tax	150,000,000
Totals	$2,430,000,000

Prospective expenditures exclusive of new relief items may be summarized as follows:

For interest on the public debt	$ 725,000,000
For national defense	585,000,000
For veterans' relief	616,000,000
For all other government operations	757,000,000
Total	$2,683,000,000

253 Million Deficit Looms.

On the face of these figures there would be a prospective deficit for 1934 of 253 millions. A large part of this deficit would be wiped out if the forthcoming reorganization of the administrative branch of the government were to effect the economy which some have estimated at as much as 200 millions.

On the other hand, what the President now fears is that the revenue is going to fall considerably short of the 2 billions 430 millions estimated. Income tax revenue in particular will not touch the estimated one billion, in the light of the figures on current receipts.

UTAH TAX FREE TOWN VOTES TO SUBMIT ITSELF TO TAXATION

Salt Lake City, Utah, March 26.—(AP)—Boulder, Utah's only tax free town, has voted to write its name on the assessment books for taxation purposes.

The settlement's two score residents devote their time to stock raising. It grew upon a tract of land which was excluded from a national forest in 1923 by executive order. The tract was excluded when the settlers agreed to have the land surveyed and create a township.

The survey was not made, however, and the settlers—under the status of squatters—continued to live in their homes without paying taxes.

Eli F. Taylor, registrar of the federal land office here, yesterday received a petition signed by 21 residents of Boulder asking that the long delayed survey be made.

When the federal government completes the survey Boulder residents will be charged $15 a lot for their land and the townsite will be added to tax assessment books.

RUSSIA BOASTS OF UNDERMINING WORLD STABILITY

BY DONALD DAY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, March 26.—The Communist International [comintern], which directs the activities of foreign revolutionary movements from its headquarters in the 14 story Gay Pay Ou [secret police] building in Moscow, is continuing to work quietly, but energetically, for a world revolution. For the first time in more than two years, Dictator Stalin has permitted the comintern to publish in Moscow Pravda a report of its activities.

The first installment published Thursday, mentions that the American section of the communist party during the past 18 months has organized to lead strikes among miners and textile workers and that in some cities large demonstrations of the idle were arranged. The comintern expressed regret that the American branch has been unable to strengthen its organization sufficiently to take advantage of situation brought about by the depression.

Aims at A. F. of L.

A continuation of the report criticizes the slow progress agents are making towards obtaining control of the trade union movement, especially in the United States "where the Federation of Labor is not so strongly organized." Moscow claims the federation is not a popular mass organization and orders its agents to bore from within to obtain control of unions through discrediting present leaders.

One fault mentioned is that of 26,000 agents working to undermine the labor movement abroad, only 14,000 are regular members of unions and this situation must be changed by agitators obtaining union cards. Foreign Reds also are ordered to work more actively within factories and works.

"Moscow not only is giving timely instructions for solutions of problems confronting its communist parties abroad, but also tells what methods are to be used in separate countries to gain control of workers. Success of the world revolution depends on implicit obedience to Moscow's orders," Pravda says.

Says "Time Is Ripe."

The first part of the report does not mention what funds Moscow has granted foreign agitators. It states that when agitators in America have organized the idle, they will, no doubt, be able to obtain financial assistance from some American municipalities. Polish, French, German, and Czechoslovakian cities have been induced by communists to furnish funds to aid their agitation, it is claimed.

The report opens by stating that events of the past two years have confirmed Stalin's thesis that capitalism, after having passed through an era of temporary stabilization, is ripe for more active revolutionary leadership from Moscow, and claims that Stalin's program to develop world revolution through cultivating strikes has been successful.

"During the past 18 months communists have succeeded in inciting many important strikes throughout the world, the report says, and even where strikers were led by reactionary noncommunist leaders, Moscow controlled reds played an important role.

Begin to Organize Farmers.

Communists abroad, continues the report, have begun for the first time actively to organize the farmers of the United States, Germany, France, Holland, Spain, and Czechoslovakia with large success. Through the excellent work of individual reds, it is claimed, Moscow has been able to influence a number of less radical workers' organizations. According to statistics of the comintern headquarters, its agents abroad now number 1,276,000, an increase of one-third since June, 1932.

Following is a summary of the comintern's report of its activities in the various countries:

JAPAN—Although the Japanese party is not large, its influence upon students, workers, peasants, and soldiers is growing and much illegal literature has been distributed.

Claims Much Headway in China.

CHINA.—Supporting the boycott against Japan, the Chinese communist party is helping the Chinese red army in its war against the Kuomintang [national government] and is defending local soviet governments in China. In the last 18 months members of the communist party have increased from 192,000 to 280,000.

SPAIN.—When the republic was declared on April 14, 1931, the communist party only had a few hundred members. Today it has 17,500 and controls unions with a membership of more than 200,000. Spanish communists made a serious mistake when they joined the monarchists in crying down the republic during the days of its organization. This alienated them from the masses, but Moscow leadership has corrected these mistakes.

Seek to Undermine Poland.

POLAND.—Success of the communist party in Poland is striking. The white Russian and Ukrainian branches are coöperating with Polish reds to undermine the present regime. Membership has increased from 7,000 to 17,000, without counting the reds in prison, which the comintern estimates at between 10,000 and 12,000.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA.—Recently communists have been very successful through outsing Trotzky followers and bringing the party under Moscow's control. Membership has made a big gain from 22,000 to 75,000.

ITALY.—Although working under a handicap, communists have been successfully penetrating into Fascist organizations and for the first time in years communists parading as loyal Fascists have been successful in organizing strikes and workers' demonstrations. Membership has increased from 3,000 to 8,000.

Leads British Strike.

ENGLAND.—Until recently communists have been unable to take leading parts in strikes, but the situation has now changed and in the recent textile workers' strike the communist party took an active part. Five thousand persons attended a communist meeting and later a parade of 15,000 persons was held sucessfully. The strike embraced 100,000 workers and communists succeeded in holding them together.

FRANCE.—Since the assassination of President Doumer by Paul Gorguloff, the communist press has developed a strong campaign against white Russians, increasing their circulation by 100,000. The reds also are fighting French imperialism and communists led the recent demonstrations of the post, telegraph, telephone, and raidio officials, chauffeurs and teachers and workers employed in the gas and electrical works against decreases in wages.

Watch U. S. Developments.

Pravda announced in conclusion that further installments of the report, which again confirms Moscow's efforts to stir up revolutions abroad, will soon be published.

The same issue of Pravda also contained several hopeful cables from its New York correspondent concerning demands that Washington immediately recognize Russia and grant Bolshevism large credits under the impression that American industries will receive large orders from Moscow. Stalin has already announced that soviet orders given abroad will be limited to what Russia cannot manufacture at home. Russia's foreign purchases, he said, will continue to be limited to basic heavy machinery in order to complete the industrialization program.

COLOMBIA TAKES RIVER TOWN IN 8 HOUR BATTLE

BOGOTA, Colombia, March 26.—(AP)—The capture of Guepi, a river settlement in the disputed Leticia border area, by Colombian troops was reported in an official bulletin tonight. The communique said that Guepi was defended by 500 soldiers of the regular Peruvian army, who were "splendidly entrenched."

After an eight hour battle the Peruvian troops abandoned their position, leaving their arms and casualties. Several Peruvians were taken prisoner and there were several Colombian casualties. Occupation of the sector was completed after a squadron of Colombian gunboats had bombed the position.

17,000 Army Recruits Parade.

LIMA, Peru, March 26.—(AP)—Seventeen thousand army recruits between the ages of 21 and 25 paraded in front of the palace today after attending solemn high mass.

Consul for Argentina Reports Flat Is Robbed

Edwardo Grunning Rosas, consul for the Argentine republic in Chicago reported yesterday to police that burglars had broken into his apartment at 5049 Sheridan road and stolen jewelry and clothing valued at $2,500. The burglary took place Saturday while he and Mrs. Rosas were at the theater.

Falling Ashes Revive Volcano Scare in Chile

MOLINA, Talca Province, Chile, March 26.—(AP)—Residents of this town 300 miles south of Santiago, Chile, have been alarmed the last three days by the falling of ashes on their houses. They believe nearby volcanoes are active.

RUSSIA SPURNS BAIL REQUEST FOR 3 BRITONS

Soviets Object to British 'Expression of Opinion.'

MOSCOW, March 26.—(AP)—A deadlock has developed in the question of bail for three British subjects, employes of the Metropolitan-Vickers electrical firm, who were arrested two weeks ago on charges of sabotage.

Coincident with an editorial attack in Russian newspapers on a British press campaign against the arrests it was revealed that Allan Monkhouse, Moscow director for the British company, still is under accusation with other employes of the company here.

[Two weeks ago Russian secret police, in raids in Moscow and Leningrad, arrested Monkhouse, five other British employes of the company and a number of Russian employes on accusations that they had engaged in sabotage in electrical construction work. A short time after their arrest Monkhouse and Charles Nordwell, a subordinate, were released under orders not to leave Moscow. Last week the public prosecutor offered the release on bail of three other employes.]

Refuses British Request.

The public prosecutor has refused the formal telegraphic request of the British company for bail for the Britons, despite his previous offer of release. He said the communication contained "entirely unacceptable and unwarranted expressions of opinion that the accused men were innocent and of disapproval of their trial."

The company also had asked that bail be set for its arrested Russian employes.

The communication was presented to the official by Monkhouse, who underwent a new four hour examination last night by the prosecutor. During the questioning he was informed in respect to his own case that "almost without precedent, an accused man has been allowed his liberty while under examination."

He was summoned for further questioning tonight.

British Press Assailed.

The soviet press today made its first comment on the two weeks' old case. Both Izvestia and Pravda carried long front page criticisms of the British press reaction.

Under the heading "No Hysterics, Gentlemen," Izvestia declared that neither a rupture of trade negotiations nor a threatened diplomatic break can intimidate the soviet government into abandoning its proceedings.

"Englishmen working here assume the same risk as in their own country when committing illegal acts," the newspaper said. "Those whom we consider guilty must be tried."

Izvestia professed to see significance in one British newspaper's expression of hope that the United States would study the Metropolitan-Vickers case before considering recognition.

"Can we believe these die hard gentlemen fear coöperation between the United States and the soviet union in keeping peace in the far east?" Izvestia continued.

MOSLEMS ATTACK BRITISH PLAN FOR INDIAN SELF-RULE

NEW DELHI, India, March 26.—(AP)—The Moslem conference executive board tonight adopted a resolution expressing profound dissatisfaction with the British government's recently published proposals for giving India a greater measure of self-government.

The resolution said the scheme failed to meet demands of the conference and urged radical changes in order that the provinces of British India might be granted the greatest possible measure of fiscal, administrative, and legislative autonomy. It demanded severe curtailment of powers of the governors and the governor general.

Moslems, it said, should be given effective representation and provision should be made for Indianization of the army within a fixed time.

Red War Minister Injured in Plane's Forced Landing

WARSAW, March 26.—(AP)—The Polish newspaper Kurjer Poranny said today that Klementi E. Voroshiloff, soviet Russia commissar for war and marine, had been injured when an airplane in which he was a passenger made a forced landing near Minsk, Russia.

7 FARM BUREAUS ORDERED JOINED; SAVES 2 MILLION

Roosevelt Starts First of Consolidations.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 26.—[Special.]—The first of the Roosevelt economy measures to be put into effect, a consolidation of activities which is expected to save the government two million dollars a year, was announced at the White House today.

The President announced that tomorrow he will send to congress an executive order consolidating under one head all the farm credit agencies of the government, seven in number.

He did not reveal what designation he has chosen for the organization he will create to handle the activities of the seven separate bureaus which are to be joined, but it is well known that it will be headed by the young New Yorker he has placed at the head of the farm board, Henry Morgenthau Jr.

Morgenthau Plans Coming.

Mr. Morgenthau, who was the Roosevelt commissioner of conservation in the New York state government, came to Washington with the President and in three short weeks has performed the somewhat herculean task of putting together seven agencies which have loaned many millions of dollars to farmers and farm banks and organizations.

The savings of two million dollars annually is expected to be accomplished chiefly through the elimination of employés in the various bureaus. At the present time left over from the Hoover administration, some 5,000 employés handle the federal farm credit activities and it is estimated that under the reorganization this figure will be cut to 2,500.

The President has assigned Secretary of Commerce Roper to the even heavier task of combining bureaus of his department, and eliminating many of them, and the saving there is expected to run much heavier than in the farm bureaus.

Douglas Surveys Other Branches.

Similarly the President has assigned his budget director, Lewis Douglas, to survey all the other departments of the government with a view toward eliminating costly bureaucratic activities wherever possible. The President expects to save 200 million dollars yearly through consolidations and eliminations of bureaus.

The President's action tomorrow will be taken under the law passed by the preceding congress giving him authority to consolidate or abolish any bureau or commission, but the law provided that congress shall be given sixty days in which to veto any orders made by the President in carrying out his reorganization.

So the order consolidating the farm credit agencies will be read in both houses of congress tomorrow and if no objections are raised which meet with the approval of majorities of both houses, the order will become effective 61 days after tomorrow.

Agencies Consolidated.

Federal farm board.
Federal land banks.
Joint stock land banks.
Intermediate credit banks.

The agricultural corporation of the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

FARMERS ACT AGAIN TO HALT EVICTIONS IN SEVERAL STATES

Des Moines, Ia., March 26.—(AP)—Quiescent for three weeks in anticipation of the federal government's "new deal," the corn belt again is showing signs of restlessness as farm debtors face eviction from their homes.

Mass action four times last week halted legal proceedings against farmers.

At Harlan, Ia., last Friday night 400 farmers gathered in the Shelby county courthouse until assured that Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McCarthy would not be evicted from their farm home the next day.

In Manitowoc county, Wisconsin, 500 farmers halted a foreclosure sale and read the law to Sheriff John Scheutte. The statute was the Donnelly law which gives sheriffs authority to postpone foreclosure sales. Sheriff Scheutte did.

Farm women turned amazon at Madison, Minn., Wednesday and achieved postponement of a foreclosure sale.

VOTE TO UNITE 66 OF ILLINOIS JEWISH ORDERS

Representatives of sixty-six Jewish fraternal orders in Illinois met at the Hotel Sherman yesterday and voted to unite the policies of the 600 lodges of their organization in the state. Temporary officers for the union of the order are W. Waiss, Jacob W. Schwartz, Henry Pitzele, Louis O. Sobel, and Samuel Gitelis. At the meeting a resolution was adopted protesting the reported mistreatment of Jews in Germany.

MacDonald-Bosville, 14th Baronet of the Isles, Dies

RUDSTON, England, March 26.—(AP)—Sir Alexander Wentworth MacDonald-Bosville, 67, 14th Baronet of the Isles, premier baronetcy of Scotland, died today at his home, Thorpe Hall. He established his right to the title in 1910 and now is succeeded by his son, Godfrey. He has been high sheriff of Yorkshire since 1901.

Pet Parrot Put to Death and Buried with Woman

Springfield, Mo., March 26.—[Special.]—When Mrs. Jennie Grace Magden, 69, was buried today, her pet parrot was buried with her in a tiny casket, enclosed within her own. After Mrs. Magden died physicians, in compliance with her request, chloroformed the parrot.

Joe Saltis and Guard Held After Police Showup

Joe Saltis, beer gangster, and Paddy Sullivan, a former policeman, who is his bodyguard, were paraded yesterday at the detective bureau showup. They will be held without booking until they hire lawyers to seek writs of habeas corpus for them, police said.

HAPGOOD SEES STORMS AHEAD FOR ROOSEVELT

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

Within six months President Roosevelt's present popularity will have been succeeded by great dissatisfaction, Norman Hapgood predicted yesterday before the Chicago Forum, meeting in the Masonic temple.

The change in sentiment will come about not because of what the President has done but because of what he has not done, it was explained by the author, lecturer, and former minister to Denmark, who spoke on "What Will Roosevelt Do?"

Speed Surprises Friends.

Even those who knew Roosevelt best, the speaker asserted, were unprepared for the speed and determination with which the President launched his program for rehabilitation of the country. His success with the public, he said, has been largely responsible for his success with congress. But, Hapgood asserted, if the legions of the idle press him too hard and too quickly to solve their problem and provide jobs for them by the thousands, his ship of state will soon encounter heavy weather.

School teachers in the audience asked Hapgood whether the President should not spend government funds for the education of children rather than for such projects as reforestation. His answer was that while educational projects might be considered preferable in principle, they could not be classed as a capital investment because there was no tangible return to the government for money spent, while the reforestation project would restore the productiveness of depleted areas and aid flood control.

Holds Job Problem Too Big.

"President Roosevelt can do a little about helping you to hurry up and get a job," Hapgood said. "You are going to be disappointed to find how little good the money he can release on these government projects will do in proportion to the vast extent of unemployment.

"There will be as many projects of the kind set in motion as the President can obtain funds for, but bear in mind that these things all have to be paid for, and that the greatest amount of help for the unemployed is going to come from the private corporations, factories, and such, whose executives have gained confidence from the recent actions of Mr. Roosevelt, rather than from the government directly," he warned. "You are not going to see better times arrive at once—they won't be back before fall."

Lewis Douglas, named by the present administration as director of the budget, is "the most interesting figure who has emerged in the Roosevelt picture," the lecturer declared.

BERLIN STRIKES AT REBIRTH OF WARLIKE HATE

Foreign Chief Calls Stories of Atrocities False.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, March 26.—Leading Socialists today conferred with Capt. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Chancellor Hitler's right hand man in the cabinet. The Socialist leaders agreed to visit neighboring countries to give Socialist organizations there the true situation in Germany in an effort to prevent unjust propaganda against the reich.

The Socialists will travel on special passports and special credentials will facilitate their work.

Dr. Hans Frank, Nazi minister of justice in Bavaria, today ordered Jewish judges to be excluded from disciplinary and commercial law cases. No Jews will be permitted to act as prosecuting attorneys except in cases now pending.

[Copyright: 1933: By the Associated Press.]

BERLIN, March 26.—Foreign Minister Konstantin von Neurath, ordinarily the Hitler cabinet's silent man who virtually never receives journalists, broke his silence today. He threw the entire weight of his internationally known personality against what he considers "the deliberate, sudden rebirth of the vilification campaign conducted during the world war against the German government."

Speaking quietly, but with an inner emotion that even his composed attitude of a man of the world could not hide, he declared:

"It is my duty, both because I must defend the honor of my people, and because I am a responsible statesman, to warn the world against permitting the baneful spirit of calumny in vogue during the war to flare up again."

Calls Terror Reports False.

To a general question regarding the federal government's attitude toward news published in the foreign press of alleged acts of terror committed against different minded persons, and especially Jews, Baron von Neurath, receiving the correspondent in his office in the Wilhemstrasse, replied in German:

"Even the best organized administrative apparatus would not suffice to go to the bottom of each and every one of these malicious, tendentious false reports and deny them.

"I find no other explanation for the present propaganda unloosed against the German government than to consider it a deliberate, sudden rebirth of the vilification campaign conducted during the world war.

"Just as Belgian atrocity stories then mentioned chopped off children's arms, so there is talk today of allegedly gouged eyes and cut off ears.

"One would really think that the foreign public, which meanwhile realized the untruth of the world war atrocity stories, would not so easily again be deceived by a new dishing up of similar fairy tales.

Points to Discipline.

"It at the beginning of the national revolution certain excesses may have been committed by isolated individuals, then that is certainly regrettable. At the same time it must be said that never in history did a revolutionary upheaval occur like that which now is completed in Germany without an accompaniment of certain hardships.

"According to my opinion, the German people gave proof of their tremendous innate discipline by the fact that such arbitrary individual acts took place only in a few cases, and even then only in comparatively mild form.

"As concerns Jews, I can only say that their propagandists abroad are rendering their co-religionists in Germany no service by giving the German public, through their distorted and untruthful news about persecution and torture of Jews, the impression that they actually halt at nothing, not even at lies and calumny, to fight the present German government.

"Why, even a prominent Jewish banker told one of your American colleagues, 'We reject all foreign interference. German Jews are he-men enough to help ourselves.'

"Actually, every visitor must agree that when he walks through the streets of Berlin even today he encounters Jews, poor as well as elegantly dressed, who are attending their business and nobody has hurt a single hair of theirs."

SHOOTS HIMSELF TO DEATH.

Abuse of Jews in Germany Halted, Secretary Hull Told

Washington, D. C., March 26.—Secretary of State Hull, in a telegram made public by the state department today, declared that investigation of reports of anti-Semitic activities in a Nazi-run Germany has shown there was considerable physical mistreatment of Jews, but that the government leaders have taken action resulting in termination of the outrages.

Secretary Hull's telegram, addressed to Rabbi Stephen Wise of New York Cyrus Adler of Philadelphia, who had called upon him with an appeal for the American government to take action to protect the Jews in Germany, follows:

"You will remember that at the time of your recent call at the department I informed you that in view of numerous press statements indicating widespread mistreatment of the Jews in Germany I would request the American embassy at Berlin, in conjunction with the principal consulates in Germany, to investigate the situation and submit a report.

Hitler Insists on Order.

"A reply has now been received indicating that whereas there was for a short time considerable physical mistreatment of Jews, this phase may be considered virtually terminated. There was also some picketing of Jewish merchandising stores and instances of professional discrimination. These manifestations were viewed with serious concern by the German government.

"Hitler in his capacity as leader of the Nazi party issued an order calling upon his followers to maintain law and order, to avoid molesting foreigners, disrupting trade and to avoid the creation of possibly embarrassing international incident. Later, Von Papen delivered a speech at Breslau in which he not only reiterated Hitler's appeal for discipline but adjured the victors of the last election not to spoil their triumph by unworthy acts of revenge and violence which could only bring discredit upon the new régime in foreign countries. As a result the embassy reports that the authority of the regular police has been reinforced.

Situation Improving.

"The feeling has been widespread in Germany that following so far reaching a political readjustment as has recently taken place, some time must elapse before a state of equilibrium could be reestablished. In the opinion of the embassy such a stabilization appears to have been reached in the field of personal mistreatment, and there are indications that in other phases the situation is improving.

"I feel hopeful in view of the reported attitude of high German officials and the evidences of amelioration already indicated, that the situation which has caused such widespread concern throughout this country will soon revert to normal. Meanwhile I shall continue to watch the situation closely, with a sympathetic interest and with a desire to be helpful in whatever way possible."

PEACE OR WAR IS AT STAKE, SAYS FRENCH LEADER

PARIS, March 26.—(AP)—Joseph Paul-Boncour, French foreign minister, speaking tonight at an international press banquet, asserted that "surely peace or war is at stake in the months in which we are living." The foreign minister prefaced his assertion by saying that the present difficulties are "grave but not insoluble."

He stressed the necessity for success of the disarmament conference, saying, "Its setback would be a signal for an armaments race of which we know too well what would be the result." M. Paul-Boncour added that such a race in the present uncertain economic state of the world likely "would precipitate a common catastrophe before any conflict."

He said that France had done her full duty in proposing a program which, by the reduction of possibility of aggression to a minimum and the establishment of reciprocal, permanent control, would be able to restore confidence. Paul-Boncour, evidently referring to revision of treaties, said disarmament progress could be assured only if "other problems, still agitating public opinion and harassing it uselessly as long as a means of solving them is undetermined," were not raised.

Nazis Increase Seats in City Election in Austria

preted by the Nazis as interference with their internal affairs by Uncle Sam would be bitterly resented.

"We would inevitably be the scapegoats," they said.

Any attempt to carry out the threat of a boycott against German goods would be particularly disastrous, they warn.

The great indignation meeting which Jews are holding in New York tomorrow is viewed largely with apprehension. When asked for some kind of statement suitable for the occasion, several prominent Jews here first decided that they did not want to go on record at all. Finally one of them was prevailed upon to speak, with the understanding that, while the American Jews should be warned to use restraint, they should also know the truth.

The truth is worse than any fiction. While admitting violence, particularly along the Rhine, the Jews are more upset about economic sanctions and interference with their religious rules. More than anything else, they suffer from decrees enacted locally in many municipalities forbidding kosher killing in their markets. This law has been adopted in Cologne, Weisbaden, Frankfort, and in the states of Baden, Wuertemburg, Hesse, Bavaria, Thuringia, and a number of individual towns.

Forced to Give Up Meat.

"The result is that all orthodox Jews cannot eat any meat, but are forced to become vegetarians," one said. "That is not so terrible in itself, but the principle is horrible.

In the economic field the Jews are particularly hit by the campaign to close to them all important professions in which they excel. Prussia already has dismissed about 60 per cent of the Jewish physicians and surgeons in the hospitals, and intends to increase it to 100 per cent. At the same time Nazi organs are conducting a campaign against Jewish doctors. They are urging patriots to insist on having Christian physicians attend them when ill. These same Nazi organs admit the eminence of Jews in medicine—which hardly could be denied of a race which produced Erlich, Wasserman, and so many others.

All Jewish judges are being removed from office and the percentage of lawyers in most states is strictly limited under new decrees. Even the teaching of journalism is forbidden them, as are all administrative and political jobs.

Vista of Poverty.

The campaign against large department stores, which are only partly Jewish owned, is another example. Frankforters allege that commercial rivals instigated the closing of many rivals. These trade rivals, Frankforters say, may not have been Christians in all cases.

Thus, with all the trades and professions closed to them, and with every kind of social discrimination and prejudice against them, leaders of German Jewry see stretching before them an appalling vista of poverty, virtual starvation and perhaps ostracism and removal of civil rights.

They see themselves as living once more as an enslaved people in a land that has become alien to them—in the bondage of Israel. They see eventually, unless something is done to help them, their forced return to the medieval Ghettos from which their forefathers emerged.

CHRISTIANS AROUSED BY HITLER TACTICS, SAYS RABBI MANN

Rabbi Louis L. Mann, spiritual leader of Sinai temple, in his address before the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall last night, said many Christian clergymen had told him of their resentment against the rise of anti-Semitism in Germany. He said these ministers demand that the persecution of the German Jews should be protested by Christian leaders.

Dr. Horace Bridges of the Chicago Ethical society, said last night that many Chicago clergymen were signing a statement which he has prepared entitled "A Friendly Protestation to the German Nation." Among the signers are Dr. Frederick F. Shannon, pastor of Central church, and Dr. E. F. Tittle of the First Methodist Episcopal church of Evanston.

Chicago Jewry will hold a protest massmeeting tonight in the auditorium theater, where Gov. Paul V. McNutt of Indiana has been announced as one of the principal speakers. During the day Jews will anticipate tonight's meeting with prayer and fasting.

BRITISH JEWRY CONDEMNS ACTS OF PERSECUTION

Protest Meeting to Be Held in London.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 26.—After a three hour discussion behind closed doors, the board of deputies of British Jews today passed resolutions of condemnation and calling upon the organization to place the case of their people in Germany before the most influential quarters possible.

Coupled with this is the statement of the Sunday Times that the British cabinet is giving reports of Jewish mistreatment in Germany the closest attention. More than 200 Jews attended today's meeting. The organization is the most influential Semitic body in Great Britain.

Disturbed Over Events.

"The board considered with deep anxiety the recent events in Germany," one resolution said. "The question whether any steps could be taken to prove useful to German Jews is being studied. They are irrespective of political associations of the past or present being singled out as special victims of political and economic persecution, accompanied in many cases by personal violence.

"The board believe that the freedom and justice demanded for Germany by her representatives abroad must also be accorded to her own citizens, Jewish and non-Jewish alike. The board has unanimously resolved to take whatever steps may be possible to secure recognition of this point of view by all responsible quarters.

Plan Protest Meeting.

"To give expression to the profound sympathy which is felt by every Jew in England and to voice indignation against persecution of Jews in Germany, steps will be taken to procure the holding of a public meeting in London at the earliest appropriate date."

Neville Laski, chairman, said that Jews are not quarreling with any political adjustment the German people care to make, but do oppose racial discriminations.

"It is untrue to say there has been anything like a mass massacre, but there have been many acts of physical violence of grave character deliberately directed against individuals because they are Jews," he said.

While the meeting was in progress automobiles placarded with slogans calling for a boycott against German goods paraded the district. Laski denied the movement had any official sanction. He described the action as a spontaneous personal manifestation.

Argentine Jews Meet Today.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUENOS AIRES, March 26.—Jewish leaders in Buenos Aires have organized a monster massmeeting for tomorrow night to protest against alleged maltreatment of Jews in Germany. Meanwhile, they have passed resolutions adhering to protests made by Jews in the United States. The Jewish population of Argentina is estimated at 400,000, of whom 250,000 reside in this city.

Polish Jews Close Shops.

WARSAW, March 26.—(AP)—Polish Jews today decided to close their shops and factories tomorrow in a universal protest against the treatment of co-religionaries in Germany.

STATES URGED TO LEAVE BEER TAXING TO U. S.

Duplicate Levies Menace All Trade, Is Warning.

The recommendation that states, municipalities and other local governmental units leave the field of taxation on beer to the federal government, except for regulatory purposes, was contained in the first report of the Interstate Commission on Conflicting Taxation, finished here yesterday for the Interstate Legislative assembly.

The legislative assembly is an official organization of delegates from each of the 48 states, appointed by their governors and legislatures. It held its first meeting in Washington on Feb. 3 and 4 under the sponsorship of the American Legislators' association, which has its administrative offices in Chicago at Drexel avenue and 58th street.

The taxation commission was formed by the assembly to study the problems of double taxation by federal and state governments. Its members have been in session here for several days.

"Unreasonable Burden on Trade."

"The conflicting taxes which the federal government and the forty-eight states are now levying impose inequitable burdens which affect every individual, farm, hamlet and city," the commission's report says. "These duplicating and excessive exactions place an unreasonable burden on business and industry.

"The unrestricted exploitation of the same sources of revenue by both the states and the federal government threatens to undermine the revenue systems of each. It presents a problem which demands immediate action on the part of the federal congress and of the state legislatures.

Combined Bill Overlooked.

"The basic consideration should be the effect of the combined burden of taxes which are imposed by the federal, state, and local governments. This has frequently been overlooked on account of the individualistic viewpoint of the 48 states and of the federal government.

"The pyramiding of taxes threatens to reduce both state and federal revenues. Unrestrained double taxation may so increase the cost of products to the consumer as to throttle commerce, increase unemployment, and delay economic recovery. It must be recognized that the economic law of diminishing returns applies inexorably to taxation."

Recommendations Are Made.

The report makes specific recommendations for the abolishment of double taxation in a number of its forms. It recommends that gasoline taxes be left to the states and that the federal government terminate its gasoline tax, levied as an emergency measure, by June 30, 1934. Similarly, the report recommends that the field of tobacco taxation, in which thirteen states have already embarked and which other state legislatures are considering, be left to the federal government exclusively.

The report recommends that taxes on electrical energy be left to the states.

Millions Are Expended; Taxes Coming In.

Washington, D. C., March 26.—(AP)—The beginning of the stream of gold which sponsors of legalized beer predicted would result from its sale was reported today in statements from industry in various parts of the country and from the federal treasury itself.

Tying in with federal estimates that millions of dollars in tax revenue would accrue to the government even before the sale of the new brew begins on April 7, representatives of the lumber, bottling and other industries reported revived activity.

A close adviser to President Roosevelt, who declined to permit use of his name, described the developments.

"We have been on a dead center for months economically," he said. "It is too early to judge definitely, for after all the money that will flow in the beer trade is but a small fraction of our national spending, but it may be the factor necessary to start business up anew."

Lumber Sales Mount.

Dr. Wilson Compton, manager of the National Lumber Manufacturers association, reported formally today in a statement that box lumber demand, both of softwoods and hardwoods, had increased appreciably in the midwest, due partly to demand for beer bottle boxes. Tank stock also was said to be in demand for brewery purposes.

Dr. Compton said "for the first time this year, board feet lumber orders booked by the mills during the week ended March 28 were heavier than for the corresponding week of 1932—14 per cent heavier."

As a part of moderate quickening of commercial and industrial activity in business generally during the past week, the bottle and bottling equipment manufacturers and some other lines reported a substantial increase in activity due to beer.

Railroads See Gains.

Operators of trucks and railroads also reported themselves hopeful that distribution of the brew would further stimulate their business. Railroads have applied to the interstate commerce commission for permission to cut their rates in order to go after the bulky business.

From Greenville, Miss., came a report of rush orders for 125,000 cottonwood beer cases, and continued activity employing nearly 200 additional men was forecast by officials of the plant.

In Chicago officials of Edward Don & Co. said they had sold more steins and goblets the last week than in any similar period in the last ten years.

A more far-reaching compilation by L. Seth Schnitman, chief statistician of the F. W. Dodge corporation, revealed estimates that more than $65,000,000 will be spent in the next few months for new breweries and for alterations and additions to old ones.

Estimate Is 400 Millions.

The estimate was based on reports from 37 states east of the Rocky mountains and on statistical calculation for the far western states. It did not include probable expenditures for building and rehabilitating retail establishments. Schnitman said it covered only a small proportion of the sums to be spent for brewery equipment and none of the other expenses incidental to starting the brewing industry. This total has been estimated by the United States Brewers association at 400 million dollars.

Dr. James M. Doran, commissioner of industrial alcohol, reported that large sums had reached the internal revenue bureau already for beer taxes and figured millions would be paid in by April 7.

Two breweries in St. Louis ordered $1,250,000 worth of revenue stamps calculated by them to last about three months. In New York, meanwhile, an estimate was made by brewers that 4,000,000 barrels of beer might be produced there during the first year, which would net the federal treasury $20,000,000.

AND THESE ARE THE BREWERS' BIG HORSES

BARKEEPS' UNION WILL TEACH ART OF DRAWING BEER

Plan for Expansion of Their Organization.

Plans for expanding the bartenders' union and restoring some of its pre-Volstead dignity were outlined yesterday by Thad C. Wittwer, president of the Chicago local.

THAD C. WITTWER.

One of the first things on the program, according to Mr. Wittwer, is the elimination of the word "soda" from the organization's name, so that it will again be the "Bartenders and Beverage Dispensers' union" instead of the "Beverage and Soda Dispensers' union." The change was made three years ago at the solicitation of prohibition enforcers.

Throughout the prohibition era the union has maintained itself, with a membership of 665. It has held frequent meetings in headquarters at 227 West Madison street and has sponsored a St. Patrick's day dinner and dance each year. Since the passage of the beer bill there have been more than 500 applications for memberships and jobs, but only 35 applicants have qualified, Mr. Wittwer said.

Art of Drawing Beer.

The art of tending bar is not something that a "hash slinger" can acquire by changing his uniform, the union president explained. Nor is a bartender's proficiency measured by his repertoire of fancy drinks. Any one can follow recipes and shake up a cocktail," Mr. Wittwer said, but the thing that distinguishes a bartender is his ability to draw a glass of beer.

"For example," said Mr. Wittwer, "a union bartender took in $95 not long ago on a barrel of beer at a big dance. A week later a nonunion bartender at the same place took in only $102 on two barrels.

"Drawing a glass of beer looks simple, but it's an art. The true bartender puts his glass under the tap and slants it at the proper angle, so the beer will rush down the side. He opens the tap all the way with a quick jerk, and he knows just when to shove it back, so there will be no wastage.

"Then he rakes off the foam and pours in enough from a reserve glass to make the beer come up with the right head and none to run over."

Plan Bartenders' School.

The union in the near future will open a bartenders' school, which all new members will be required to attend until they qualify for jobs, Mr. Wittwer said. There will be a special meeting of the union next Sunday afternoon, at which the questions of wages, jobs, new members, and other matters will be discussed. The present salary scale is $35 a week, and there is talk of increasing it $5 a week, he said.

Mr. Wittwer said he expected the membership of the union to reach 3,000 within the next six months. There will be no "muscle" men, he said, but union representatives will visit all the bars in town and urge bartenders to join the union. Initiation cost $12.50, dues $2 a month, and there are sick and death benefits.

Prayer for Bartenders.

Before prohibition, Mr. Wittwer said, it was the custom to open all union meetings with prayer, asking for deliverance from the temptations that beset a bartender.

Thomas Wall, the chaplain, performed this rite, which is to be revived with the return of legal beer.

Another old member is Harry Boughton, who tended bar in the Palmer house before prohibition. He has been a bartender for 48 years.

George McLane is business agent of the union, which is affiliated with the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' International union and Bartenders' League of America.

RAILROAD GIVES BEER CREDIT FOR HEAVY INCREASE IN BUSINESS

St. Louis, Mo., March 26.—(AP)—Officials of the Missouri Pacific railroad announced today that between 350 and 400 carloads of freight had been received by the road last week as a result of passage of the beer bill in Washington. The shipments consisted chiefly of kegs and bottles. Officials of other railroads said their tonnage also had shown an increase as a result of the beer bill. Shipments of barley, malt and other ingredients for beer are arriving for St. Louis breweries.

Burlington, Ia., March 26. — [Special.]—The coming of legal beer will mean nothing to West Burlington, the suburb up the hill where the shops are located. KIDNAP ESCORT OF GIRL IN AUTO ON RURAL ROAD

Suburban police were searching this morning for Charles Evans, who was kidnaped in Schiller Park late last night from the side of his companion, Miss Evelyn Roberts, 24 years old, 6830 Wentworth avenue. He is believed to live near Harlem avenue and Washington boulevard.

Miss Roberts said she met Evans earlier in the night at the Social Turner hall, Paulina street and Belmont avenue. They later went out for a drive, she said. At River road and Lawrence avenue, Schiller Park, three men in another car stopped them, Miss Roberts related. One robbed her of several trinkets and then put her out of the car. The robber boarded the car and compelled Evans to drive north, his companions following.

ITALY JAILS 17 LEADERS OF NEW CATHOLIC PARTY

MILAN, Italy, March 26.—(AP)—A recent attempt to form a new party known as "Guelfs" has resulted in the arrest of 17 persons and the trial of two organizers by the special tribunal for the defense of the state.

The organizers are Francesco Scotto and Aldo Mirotti. They were sentenced last night to seven and four years' imprisonment respectively. Mirotti was granted amnesty and the others were released on probation.

The 17 persons comprised former members of the dissolved popular, or Catholic, party. The Guelfs were a papal party in medieval Italy opposed to the imperial Gibelene party.

There they compelled Hans Pahl, the cashier, the only other employé on the premises, to open the safe, from which they took the money.

TRIP AROUND WORLD ON ENERGY OF ATOM SEEN IN THE FUTURE

Los Angeles, Cal., March 28.—(AP)—All forms of material wealth as free as air, the problem of leisure substituted for idleness, a trip around the world on energy generated by a spoonful of water.

Two California Institute of Technology scientists believe such a Utopian era, dependent upon the harnessing of the atom by converting the mass of its nucleus into energy, has been brought many years closer to fulfillment by their recent discoveries and conclusions.

The theoretical predictions are by Dr. R. M. Langer, nationally recognized authority on nuclear structure, and Russell Raitt, a graduate student. The include:

Discovery that beryllium, one of the two lightest metals, is radio-active and that the average atom in it lives 100 million-million years before its mass is converted into energy by spontaneous explosion.

Discovery that the masses of atomic nuclei can be calculated more accurately from measurements of the energy generated in explosions of radio-active atoms.

Data that may lead to the first accurate determination of the mass of the neutron.

Conclusion that determination of the mass of any atomic nuclei will reveal virtually everything to be known regarding that particular type of atom.

BANDITS FOILED IN HOLDUP SHOOT GIRL IN THE ARM

Miss Dorothy Portugais, 430 South Central avenue, was shot in the right arm early yesterday by one of three bandits who were fleeing from the building in which she lives after an unsuccessful attempt to break into an apartment.

There was a card game in progress in the apartment of Joseph Levin on the third floor. The three gunmen beat on the door and demanded admission, one of them shouting, "This is a stickup." Levin went to the telephone and called police. The bandits fired three shots through the door and fled.

On the stairway they met Miss Portugais and her escort, William Smason, 1230 South Kedzie avenue. One of them shot her as they passed. The men appeared to be intoxicated, Smason said later.

JAMES STEVENS UNCHANGED; HAS RESTFUL NIGHT

The condition of James W. Stevens, 80 year old former chairman of the Illinois Life Insurance company, was reported unchanged yesterday afternoon, although a slight improvement was noted in the morning after he had spent a restful night. Mr. Stevens was stricken with apoplexy eight days ago and was reported near death several times. He has not been informed of the suicide on Thursday of his son, Raymond W. Stevens, former president of the insurance company, who, with his father and brother, Ernest J. Stevens, was under indictment charged with conspiracy to defraud the insurance company.

The conspiracy case is to be called before Judge Philip L. Sullivan in the Criminal court today, but State's Attorney Courtney said the elder Stevens would be granted a severance and that Ernest J. Stevens would receive a long continuance because of the recent misfortunes of his family.

ILLUSION:
A "strong man" once gave public performances in which he stopped a 9 lb. cannon ball shot from a fully charged cannon. The audience gasped when the gun flashed and the human Gibraltar stepped forward out of the smoke uninjured, with the 9 lb. shot in his hands.

EXPLANATION:
The trick lay in the way an assistant prepared the cannon for the performance. He used the regulation amount of powder and wadding, but placed the greater part of the charge of powder ahead of the shot. The cannon ball was propelled only by the small charge behind it which was just sufficient to lob the 9 lb. ball over to the strong man.

It's fun to be fooled— ...it's more fun to KNOW

A performance sometimes staged in cigarette advertising is the illusion that cigarettes are made easy on the throat by some special process of manufacture.

EXPLANATION: All cigarettes are made in almost exactly the same way. Manufacturing methods are standard and used by all. A cigarette is only as good as the tobaccos it contains.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

In costly tobaccos you will find mildness, good taste, throat-ease.

Smoke Camels critically, and give your taste a chance to appreciate the greater pleasure and satisfaction offered by the more expensive tobaccos. Other cigarettes, we believe, will taste flat and insipid to you forever after.

SEE NEW CRISIS ON PICKET MOVE IN MINE REGION

Progressives Plan Drive; Officers Prepared.

West Frankfort, Ill., March 26.—(AP)—Battle clouds scudded above Franklin county coal fields today as progressive miners prepared for their big picketing drive on its collieries.

State highway police from Benton were ordered to the county line tonight on reports that a large number of miners from other parts of the state were attempting to enter Franklin county.

Stronghold of their union rivals, the United Mine Workers of America, and Illinois' largest soft coal production sector, Franklin county was the Waterloo of the progressives last Aug. 24.

Then, in the famous battle of Mulkeytown, 12,000 of their members, in a motorcade 15 miles long, were repulsed and fled in disorder before the gunfire and clubs of deputy sheriffs.

"Closed" to Picketing.

County and city officials announced today the section was still closed to picketing. Arthur Hughes, secretary to the president of the progressive miners, said:

"We will picket any mine that attempts to open tomorrow."

Franklin county mines employ more than 8,000 diggers under the banner of the United Mine Workers.

Report They're Ready.

"Steps have been taken," they said, "to deal with any situation that might arise and no picketing of mines or demonstrations that officials consider detrimental to the peace of the communities will be permitted."

A warning that any of its members found sympathizing with the progressive movement would be discharged in accordance with union by-laws was issued by Ray Edmundson, president of subdistrict 9, United Mines Workers.

Literature espousing the progressive cause flooded the county.

"No force will cow our efforts," read one handbill.

NIGHT SHIFT AT FORD'S BRITISH PLANT STRIKES

DAGENHAM, England, March 26.—(AP)—The majority of the night shift at the Ford factory here went on strike tonight.

The strike began at 10 p. m., at which hour hundreds of employes arriving to start work found the entrance picketed. They were informed that at a meeting the strike had been decided upon as a protest against wage reductions said to have been instituted during the last week.

The reductions were said to range from 3 pence an hour to 17 pence an hour. [The penny at current rates of exchange is approximately 1.5 cents.] After listening to the arguments of the speakers, a majority of the workers agreed to join the strike.

Police Chief on Trial Today for Death of Miner's Wife

Pana, Ill., March 26.—[Special.]—Chief of Police Albert Mattozzo and Emil Dupire, a Gillespie coal miner, will go on trial in the Christian county Circuit court at Taylorville tomorrow on charges of the murder of Vincent Rodems, Springfield youth, and Mrs. Emma Cumberlato, wife of a Progressive miner, who were slain in a pitched battle between pickets of the Progressive miners and United Mine Workers miners at Kincaid Jan. 3, last.

Wabash Valley Lowlands Flooded; River 22 1-2

Mount Carmel, Ill., March 26.—(AP)—Lowlands in the Wabash valley resembled small seas today as the river rose another foot to a stage of 22½ feet. This is seven feet above flood stage. Secondary roads in the river bottom were under water.

EVANSTON HOME LOOTED.

Raymond Kelly, 2113 Noyes street, Evanston, reported to police yesterday that while he and his family were attending the theater burglars broke into their home and stole $250 worth of tax warrants and a ring valued at $150.

SELF-POLISHING SHOE LEATHER ANNOUNCED BY MELLON INSTITUTE

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 26.—(AP)—A new, self-polishing shoe leather was announced today by the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research.

The heat of the foot, says the announcement, activates a polish impregnated in any color in the leather so that the shoes "require only a slight rubbing to preserve the desired polished effect."

The polish is only part of "an entirely new combination of materials" impregnated in leather. These substances are said to "support and lubricate" fibers of the leather, preventing their breaking down under wear, to simplify manufacturing processes, "add to the leather's water resisting qualities," do away with "cracking" and to produce a shoe "practically scuffproof."

The novel finish is announced as applicable to various kinds of leather, but particularly designed for the kid types.

SCIENCE PRIZE IS AWARDED TO INSTRUCTOR, 30

Washington, D. C., March 26.—(AP)—Frank H. Spedding, Ph.D., a little known 30 year old scientist, who has fashioned a new method of seeing into the invisible fine structure of solid matter, tonight was awarded the youthful genius prize of $1,000 by the American Chemical society.

The award was announced on the eve of the society's eighty-fifth annual meeting, at which more than 2,000 chemists and industrial leaders are expected to gather here.

The prize given Dr. Spedding is the Langmuir award "in recognition of accomplishment in North America of outstanding research in pure chemistry by a young man or woman."

Dr. Spedding is an instructor at the University of California. He uses the light which can be reflected by solids, such as rocks and minerals, to reveal what scientists call their "lattice" structure.

GIVES WILD BEER PARTY ON RELIEF CHECK; IS SHOT

Albert J. Schown, 32 years old, got a relief check from the county bureau of public welfare Saturday and proceeded to stage a beer party in the home of his parents-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stevenson, at 5107 South Melvina avenue, with whom he and his wife, Louise, lived. The party ended early yesterday when Schown was shot and seriously wounded by Mrs. Stevenson.

Witnesses told police that Schown had hired a three piece Negro orchestra and bought a quantity of home brew for the party, which was to be a surprise on Mrs. Stevenson.

Stevenson quarreled with Mrs. Schown, who is his stepdaughter, and slapped her. Schown struck Stevenson, and Mrs. Stevenson obtained a revolver and shot Schown in the abdomen. She was arrested.

OUST PRESIDENT OF UNIVERSITY OF WASHINGTON

Seattle, Wash., March 26.—(AP)—Dr. M. Lyle Spencer, president of the University of Washington for the last five and a half years, was removed from office today by a unanimous vote of the board of regents.

The board said the action was "not to be construed as a reflection upon" the loyalty or ability of Dr. Spencer, who joined the university faculty as a professor of journalism in 1919.

"It simply means," the regents announced, "that after careful study we are convinced the problems with which the university is confronted are of such a nature that no man at present connected with the university can successfully work out a solution."

Dr. Spencer had submitted his resignation as a matter of form to the new regents when they took office Jan. 27. The board said he would be allowed his salary until June 30, but that he would be relieved of his duties at once. Some member of the present faculty is to be chosen as acting president.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

THE PRESIDENT'S LABOR ARMY.

President Roosevelt's proposal for the enrollment of 250,000 workers meets instant objection from William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. The President would take a quarter of a million men, put them in quasi-military organization, give them their subsistence on virtually an army basis, pay them a dollar a day, and put them to work on projects not in conflict with normal private enterprises and employment. This scheme, when compared with the present method of providing relief without providing or requiring work, seems desirable. When thoroughly examined, faults may appear, but many things can be said for it. Not only single men but probably in some cases men of family could be taken off the streets or out of idleness, given healthy employment and with it a better morale, relieved of the depressing psychological effect of being jobless, under a semi-military form of organization and supervision.

There is not much excuse for saying that such a plan involves involuntary servitude or that it tends to a lowering of wage levels in normal enterprise. It may be found that it is the most economical means of supporting the men, and even at $30 a month they would have more than their subsistence. They would have some spending money. Some money would begin flowing into the hands of persons who are not now earning anything.

Mr. Roosevelt suggests that work be found for this army in the national and state forests. He does not emphasize the army connection involved, but only the extreme pacifist would shy at the military suggestion. The army is very likely the best administrative unit for the handling of such a mobilization of men and the measure of military discipline would only enhance the benefits which both the country and the men might obtain. It may be found inadvisable to make the terms of enrollment too rigid, but this and other points can be taken up in the deliberations upon the proposal. It may even be found that the number of men to be provided for thus can be very considerably increased. Enrollment will be a test of character of the idle man offered an opportunity to prove that he wants work and a chance to earn some money.

Mr. Green's objections do not appear reasonable. The President does not propose to conscript men who have other opportunities in life at the present time or to farm them out for the private advantage of any promoters. He is endeavoring to provide work which will not conflict with private enterprise and to offer relief with a thought not only of the public costs involved but of the individual character affected. Less reasonable proposals have met less objection and have had more encouragement. The theory is that millions of men desire nothing so much as a job. If we are to have much confidence for the future we must believe that theory is in general true. Idleness is corrupting if it is spread over a long period of years. Neither despair nor indifference can be permitted to affect so large a proportion of the population. Mr. Green ought to consider that as men suitable for this government work can be thus provided for the reopening of private enterprises will be more immediately beneficial to other men whose situation and responsibilities may make such enrollment and employment of them impracticable.

POLITICS AND PROTECTION FROM CRIME.

The daughter of a prominent politician has had a very disagreeable experience as the victim of two criminals. Sympathy for her and indignation against the criminals will be sincere and strong, but they cannot prevent the reflection that practical politics has much to do with the lack of an administration of law which would make the law feared and the security of citizens what it ought to be in a well ordered community. Indifference or resistance to improvements in the administration of justice, complaisant acceptance of notorious conditions, political alliance with undesirable forces, demoralization of the police, prosecuting agencies, and even the courts by the use of pressure are a part of practical politics and the chief causes of the inefficiency of our protection from criminal violence.

MISSING PAPERS.

Delay in perfecting appeal of Timothy Crowe, former president of the whoopee sanitary board; Frank Link, a trustee, and John T. Miller, superintendent of plants and buildings, is accounted for by lack of essential documents. The missing papers are said to have been loaned by the state's attorney's office for use in a civil suit and photostatic copies offered by the state in the appeal proceedings have been held to be unacceptable. The individual who is said to have possession of the originals is not in town. Until he returns the perfecting of the appeal in the sanitary case is held up. No doubt this matter will be cleared up, but meanwhile the final disposition of the sanitary case has been postponed two weeks. The proceedings have been significantly slow since judgment was rendered and we hope will now be pushed energetically to a conclusion. The defendants are influential politicians and especially in such cases the processes of justice should be kept free from suspicion. The public knows that delay increases the chances of miscarriage and certainly if there is to be a punishment of guilt the longer the delay the less the moral effect of punishment. It is a truism that justice should be swift and notorious that the law's delay is its greatest defect in this country. Where influential defendants are involved it becomes a source of disrespect for law and government.

APRIL 7TH.

If there is to be a celebration of the return of beer it should emphasize something more important than the satisfaction of a taste for this beverage, however reasonable that taste may be. The significance of this event lies deeper. It is not of vast importance that those who like beer should now be able to please their palates. It is of vast importance that federal government shall retreat from a field in which it does not belong, that an ill-advised experiment in sumptuary legislation is approaching its inevitable end, that the right of private conduct and personal liberty is to be restored.

The theory of dry opposition to reform asserts that the demand for modification and repeal is merely the expression of a selfish and irresponsible appetite. If it were so it could be defeated. The revolt against prohibition is on higher ground. It is a revolt against the loss of local and individual liberty, against the extension of government control over private conduct, against a régime of persecution, against the repudiation of the American system of government.

The act authorizing the manufacture and sale of beer permits the gratification of a reasonable taste for that beverage. It will give new revenue to the national, state and local governments, which is sorely needed. These are acceptable and even important benefits. But it is as the first step in the release from bigotry and the restoration of American principles of government that it is momentous and worthy of celebration by responsible citizenship. The kind of celebration reported to be preparing will not help the cause of repeal. The warning of the Crusaders, the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, and the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment should be heeded. But we suggest that these associations and organizations of the legal profession and of patriotic citizens concerned for the preservation of American institutions might well give expression to their sense of the event as a victory for American free government and sane legislation.

FOR A NEW TRANSPORT POLICY.

A program for rehabilitating the railroads now in process of formulation by the administration will, it is reported, include as its first step the merger of all federal agencies now concerned with transportation, whether by rails, highways, water or air.

The vital consideration in such consolidation of authority is that it should not extend the scope of government regulation over the nation's transport but free it. The fate of the railroads is impressive warning of the destruction which intensive government regulation wreaks upon transport service. If the consolidation of federal control agencies is not merely to spread the existing evils a new policy must be established.

Established as a means of abolishing or restraining certain practices, our scheme of federal regulation expanded far into fields of control never intended. It evolved a system of regulation which amounted to a comprehensive control of operation and has proved to be so rigid and oppressive that railroad transport has been gradually strangled. That there are other factors, such as improvident financing, responsible in part for the plight of the railroads, should not distract attention from this major factor in their deterioration. The interstate commerce commission has assumed and has now a task which it cannot perform. Its attempt to regulate has almost paralyzed operation, and the protection it has given to shippers and consumers has been more than offset by the damage done. It is necessary for the welfare not merely of the railroads but of the public that this system of strangulation shall be ended. It would be folly to extend it to the whole field of transportation.

Both new and old agencies of transport should be given the maximum freedom to live and develop. The function of the government is not to operate transport agencies, which is in effect what it is doing with the railroads, but to prevent practices in finance and general policies demonstrated to be injurious to the public interest. That is all the protection the public needs and all a federal authority can properly perform. The present system of regulation should be deflated, not extended.

Editorial of the Day

NO TIME FOR SUCH A LAW.

[Wisconsin State Journal.]

Senator Herman J. Severson may have had an idea in his bill to bar inspectors from the Chicago health department from coming into Wisconsin to pass upon Wisconsin milk destined for the Chicago market and the conditions of its production that will be a necessary law in some future day. Possibly in time Wisconsin inspections by officers from another state may be a hardship against which the state will be called upon to legislate.

No such conditions seem to exist at this time, however, and certainly the Severson bill would have been an inopportune law under present conditions of the fluid milk market. The senate showed proper appreciation of the statements as to the injury that the proposed law might have worked to Wisconsin dairy farmers in according it an overwhelming defeat.

Chicago demands the inspection of milk sold in that city by inspectors from its health department. Wisconsin shippers sending their milk to the Illinois market are, by a large majority, willing the inspection shall be accorded.

The dairy farmers of southern Wisconsin certainly need the Chicago market at this time. Had the Severson bill become a law, the Chicago market would in all probability have been closed to Wisconsin milk. Illinois and Indiana dairymen would have profited from a lack of Wisconsin competition. Barring of Wisconsin milk from the Chicago market would have made the task impossible that Wisconsin officials are attempting—of securing better milk prices for Wisconsin farmers.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the gulps fall where they may.

IMPRISONED in our little home by the flu or the flu's first cousin, we gaze day by day out into the March weather in the street below. And in spite of the fact that this is Spring, old man Winter seems to be holding high carnival all over the place and getting rowdier and rowdier. If this month of March would ever clear out we feel that it would take our flu along with it, but March just sticks around and gives no signs of beating it. Now it's just settled down to a question of endurance—it's a fifty-fifty bet which lasts the longest—us or March. And if this bleak, dreary, cold, snowy, icy, lousy weather keeps up we hope we lose.

A MOTHER'S PRAYER.

Lord Jesus, You who bade the children come
And took them in Your gentle arms and smiled,
Grant me unfailing patience through the days
To understand and help my little child.

I would not only give his body care
And guide his young dependent steps along
The wholesome ways, but I would know his heart,
Attuning mine to childhood's griefs and song.

Oh, give me vision to discern the child
Behind whatever he may do or say;
The wise humility to learn from him
The while I strive to teach him day by day.

ADELAIDE LOVE.

THERE ARE SO MANY pictures of beer in the newspapers, beer in steins, beer in glasses, beer on bars, beer in the hands of the old time bartenders, and so on and so on, page after page, that we're getting afraid that when the great day, April 7, finally rolls around and at last it has all come true and a man comes to our table and uncorks a bottle and begins to pour beer into our stein, we'll just smile in a bored way and say, "No beer, thanks, just bring a glass of buttermilk." Life is like that.

WHAT A LONG TAIL OUR CAT HAS GOT.

Dear Dick:

They say the catfish climbs the trees,
And robs the roosts, and down the breeze
Prolongs his caterwaul.
Oh, leave him in his western flood
Where the Mississippi churns the mud.
Don't bring him here at all!

In such a manner Punch protested two or three generations ago against the introduction of the catfish into the ethical haunts of the Anglican trout and salmon; and I offer it on the assumption that it was from this and the four other stanzas that you (and the seismologists to a lesser degree) drew your picture of last Saturday's ictalurus punctatus (Rafinesque), showing how phlegmatic English humor can be; how ridiculous scientists need be, and how columnists should profit by the example.

To your "they're just fish bums that muck around in the river and drive away respectable fish that want to lead clean, decent, orderly lives," I reply: the channel cat is a dignified, aloof, reticent, clean, and particular habitant of our streams whose one desire is to be left alone. He never bothers the other fish, he seldom invades their spawning areas, and, if he does, it is by mistake, and he immediately draws himself away. He associates on friendly though demarcated terms with the small-mouth and big-mouth bass—and is "high hat" to all others. His home is just below the fastest of riffles and in the deepest and cleanest of waters.

Yet . . . a silurian leper to Englishmen! A seismometer to scientists! Less than a last line to column conductors! But what a formidable foe he was, there in the halcyon days of my lost youth when, under the sheer sandstone cliff that marked his favorite haunts, a channel of olivaceous hue below a riffle that gurgled over pebbles bleached whiter than even the incisors and molars of the dentrifice advs., he and I did try our skill one against the other—the medium of our muted debate a willow wand, a strand of waxened thread, and that greatest of all inventions, a bent pin! . . .

And in victory he is far nobler, far more considerate of his humiliated adversary than, say, the black bass; for, once having straightened the hook and given sudden slackness to the line, he does not vertiginously break the water twice his own length to show contempt for the chagrined bungler on the bank and the synchronized futility of a thirty dollar reel, but straightway sinks silently, unseen, to the farthest coign of his subterranean retreat, there, no doubt, to lie like an old philosopher (but not like a scientist!) in righteous contemplation of that quoerest of bipeds, the brother of the angle.

THAT FELLA DOWN IN STREATOR.

THE TRIAL of the young officer in the Tower of London proves how hard the military tries to impress the public that they possess deep and terrible secrets. The only secret they've got we'd like to find out is why they wear spurs when driving their automobiles.

LILT.

—to be sung to the rhythmical clink of pennies being tossed into tin cups.

Sing a song of sixpence.
I haven't got a penny.
I tried to get a job today.
It seems there aren't any.

Sing a song of rackets:
The entrée into clover.
I'll have a penthouse and a yacht
Before the Fair is over.

THIS BUY AMERICA thing is getting into full swing. We heard a soapbox evangelist the other night declaring that no hundred per cent American should want to go anywhere but to an American heaven or hell. We're not exactly positive that there is an American heaven, but we're sure about the other place, and you're bound to land right in the middle of it if the government catches you not paying your income tax. IS SULPHUR USELESS?

At last a medicinal use of sulphur appears to have been found. It is being used for the purpose of inducing fever, and fever, our old time enemy, is being harnessed and put to work.

When some authority breaks into print with a tale about the amount of the different ingredients going to make up the human body, sulphur is always found on his list. The total amount used in the making of a man is not large, but what is there is a part of protein, and this is the main ingredient of muscle and other very necessary structures. Therefore a proper supply of sulphur is very necessary for human welfare. We eat it in eggs, meat, and molasses, not to mention some other foods. When we try to give it in the form of a salt we do not appear to get very far. Several of the saline laxatives and of the purgative mineral waters contain a considerable proportion of sulphates and sulphides. But these are used for the purposes they are because of the fact that the organs of absorption will have none of them. They are rejected, and with considerable virulence. And that's why they are used. An old fashioned spring medicine is sulphur and molasses. The sulphur is used in some form of sulphur powder, and it passes through as an inert material having no special therapeutic effect and exerting no physiological influence. Molasses is a fairly good laxative and it may be a pretty fair worm medicine. If the mixture has any action due to sulphur it may be that because of a fair amount of that element found in molasses.

All in all the taking of sulphur and molasses in the spring may be regarded as a disciplinary procedure, an obeisance children are required to make to superior authority. Maybe it is a springtime penance and gratitude offered on the altar as one lands from the voyage through winter.

The new use of sulphur is one which recognizes the futility of trying to get inorganic sulphur by the liver gateway. The medicine is mixed with olive oil and injected into the muscles. In this way it gets to the brain and other organs through the back door or, at least, it by-passes the liver.

The result of the injection is a high fever lasting several hours. Injections are given once or twice a week and they are given in courses of twelve. It has long been known that persons with certain types of insanity are very much improved mentally following attacks of such febrile diseases as erysipelas and typhoid fever. Acting on this hint, physicians have been inoculating the insane with malaria, but to this practice there was the objection that malaria is a dangerous disease not always controllable and sometimes fatal.

Various substitutes for malaria injections have been tried. Killed bacteria is one; milk, another. Sulphur in olive oil is offered as safer and more effective than any other.

Nor is use limited to the treatment of insanity. It may have a field in arthritis and other joint diseases, and in some catatonic and other emotional disorders not due to insanity.

URTICARIA.

J. C. writes: I have been sick a year with urticaria. Can it be cured or not? How should I treat myself?

REPLY.

Nettle rash comes and goes, and it may do so at intervals for one year or for many. A person who is subject to nettle rash has been sensitized to something, and whenever he is exposed to that something he is liable to an attack.

The sensitization may be to some food. Other possible causes are dandruff, hair, feathers, dust.

Find the cause and avoid it and you will have no more attacks. Other treatment is liable to prove disappointing.

SNORING.

C. J. writes: I am a very sound sleeper, but I am told I snore and have for years.

REPLY:

Snoring is caused by vibration of the palate. The usual cause of that is sleeping with the mouth open and breathing through both the nose and the mouth. If you can acquire the habit of sleeping with your mouth closed you will not trouble your end of town by snoring.

Among the procedures that sometimes work are wearing a chin elevator held on by a head stall and sealing the lips together at night with adhesive. Sleeping on the side and front helps. When one sleeps on his back his mouth is almost certain to fly open.

PILES.

G. J. O. writes: What causes itching piles and what is the cure? Will dieting help and, if so, what foods would you suggest?

REPLY:

Diet will have no effect beyond helping constipation. The sequence is constipation, hemorrhoids, itching.

In some cases unusual cleanliness cures the third of these. In others tanning with light of one sort or another cures the symptom.

If the second is cured the third disappears. This may be done by operation of one sort or another. Some cases are cured by simpler procedures.

Overcoming the first by diet and training sometimes cures the second, whereupon the third disappears.

WAGE CLAIM.

Chicago, March 20.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I have a written statement from a store which owes me $130 in back salary. The store at present is reincorporated under a new name. Is the new incorporated store liable for my bill of labor? Can I force judgment against the store? Do I stand a good chance of collecting my salary if I file suit?

H. B.

If by reincorporated you mean that they merely changed their name, then clearly this would not change their liability to you. If an entirely different corporation has bought out the assets of the corporation that owed you the money then your chances of collecting from the successor would depend largely on whether the bulk sales law was complied with by giving five days' notice in writing to creditors of the corporation.

ADOPTION.

Cicero, Ill., March 20.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—My husband is desirous of adopting my daughter, who is 13 years old. 1. How can this be done with the least posible expense? 2. Is it necessary to obtain the consent of the child's father, who is living but has not contributed to her support for some time and whose exact whereabouts are vague? A. S.

1. There should be court proceedings in the County court. Presumably it will be advisable to employ an attorney.

2. Desertion or abandonment of the child is a statutory ground for putting through the adoption without his consent.

WATER LEAK.

Chicago, March 21.—[Friend of the People.]—Inasmuch as I do not know which branch of the city government should receive this request, I ask your kind favor to forward same. The water plug in the ground in the parkway next to the curb is now leaking and has been leaking since zero weather was here and should be repaired. J. J. E.

Ten days ago the north district, water pipe extension, repaired a 1 inch service pipe at this location. This has stopped all leakage.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

MARCH 27, 1917.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Democratic house leaders conferred with Secretary of State Lansing on the form of the prospective resolution of congress declaring a state of war with Germany, on the early enactment of espionage legislation, and on the creation of a great secret service to guard against the operations of German plotters. Secretary Lansing told them it was the wish of the President to have congress declare a state of war with Germany in preference to making a straight out declaration of war. The suggestion met the approval of the committeemen. President Wilson favors a declaration that a state of war exists because it will place the responsibility for aggression on Germany.

OTHER WAR STEPS.—President Wilson authorized increasing the enlisted strength of the marine corps to 17,400 men, at the same time making an appeal to the boys of the nation through the press. The navy department began a campaign for 25,000 men to raise the enlisted strength to the war basis of 87,000. The President called many more militia to the federal service, including three Illinois regiments. He probably will summon the whole guard soon.

LONDON.—Spirited and successful French attacks near Coucy and above Soissons, where the German front bends into a loop below Laon, and the repulse of German counter attacks on the new French positions between Essigny and Benay, south of St. Quentin, marked the day in the battle which has become general along "the Hindenburg line." The armies of Gen. Neville are pressing forward against an ever stiffening resistance by the German forces. According to the war office statement issued in Paris, the French managed to thrust back the Germans from the towns of Folembray and Lefeuilles. This conquered territory lies between Coucy and the forest of Coucy.

BERLIN.—The sinking of twenty-five more steamships, fourteen sailing vessels, and thirty-seven trawlers, with an aggregate gross tonnage of 80,000 in the last few days is announced by the admiralty.

NEW YORK.—Twenty-nine members of the aerial coast patrol, the "millionaire flying corps," will leave for West Palm Beach, Fla., on March 28. They have been ordered out for training by Secretary Daniels. The corps consists of Yale students and recent graduates, as follows: F. Trubee Davison, Harry P. Davison, Jr., Robert A. Lovett, Albert J. Ditman, Charles Winans, Artemas L. Gates, John M. Farwell, John Young, Earl Gould, Wellesley Laud-Brown, Reginald C. Coombe, Oliver B. James, G. Franklin Lawrence, William Rockefeller, Frederick Beach, Kenneth Smith, Kenneth MacLeish, Curtis Read, Bartow Read, David Ingalls, A. D. Sturtevant, William Thompson, Frank Lynch, Graham Brush, Henry Landon, Samuel S. Walker, Charles Stewart, and Archie McIlwaine.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The American liner St. Louis, first armed American ship to cross the Atlantic, has arrived safely at its destination, Secretary Daniels announced.

JOBS.

Chicago, March 20.—In my capacity as receiver I naturally come in contact with a great many people living as tenants in the buildings which it is my business to manage, and being rather socially minded I try to find work for as many of these as are unemployed.

I find, of course, that by far the largest number of them belong to the building trades: Plumbers, bricklayers, plasterers, carpenters, metal workers, painters, and electricians. It is rather touching to see how eager they are to find something to do and how loyal they are, in the great majority of cases, when given an opportunity to exercise their skill in their chosen field; for it not only gives them and their families much needed support and comfort but in many cases offers them an escape from a domestic atmosphere which has become almost unendurable through daily contact under the most trying conditions. There is probably nothing sadder than virtuous poverty and there is a great deal of it in this depression.

There is, it seems to me, too much organized charity and not enough organized effort to find employment. Last week as I waded out to my car, parked in Grant park at Monroe street, through a sea of rain and slush, I wondered why this place had not been made more slightly and more productive by cement walks and runways. [By the way, who gets all of this parking money? I would like to see an army of cement workers getting some of it.] This will be a busy place during the World's Fair and in its present condition certainly will not make a very good impression on our visitors.

As a result of the thousands of foreclosures which have gone through the mill we shall soon be in the unique position of a city whose buildings will be owned by the former bondholders, free of debt. A recent examination of some of these, in the hands of receivers, shows them in need of paint, rehabilitation, and repair—certainly not inviting to capital in the form of new small mortgages, out of which taxes can and will be paid. These new first mortgages, by the way, will offer an absolute safe 6 per cent return on the soundest and only really basic security on earth. If real estate values were inflated before, they are surely now down to bedrock and reality. There can be only one way for them to move in price, in the future, and that is upward. Chicago is great now and has a still greater future.

If we can't put these men to work on new structures, let's rebuild the old ones.

E. P. CONRADI.

$30 A MONTH.

Chicago, March 24.—Say, this fellow Green of the American Federation of Labor gives me a pain. He holds up his hands in holy horror at the very thought of a man working for $30 a month and room and board. He claims it is a blot on the wage levels of the country. I'll say it is. Roosevelt's reforestation plan calls for the type of labor now being done on the average American farm for $10 to $15 a month, and, mind you, not all of that in cash. Say, if the President's plan goes through the farm hands (yea, and the farmers, too) will go after those $30 a month jobs so fast that the farms will make Goldsmith's "Deserted Village" look like State and Madison on Dollar day. Say, how many of you white collar guys are making $30 a month clear over your room and board? A blow at American wage levels. Fooey!

A. W. STANBERRY.

BAD DESIGN OR SABOTAGE?

Chicago, March 21.—Interesting news about "certain British engineers now in the cheka prison at Moscow." These men, officials and employes of the Metropolitan-Vickers Electrical company, which supplied steel for the Dnieprostroi turbines, are said to be accused of ruining the turbine blades by pouring acid or sand into them. It has been stated that the turbine blades were found to be badly corroded.

The writer does not know the characteristics of the Dnieprostroi turbines, therefore does not advance any opinions. There would, however, appear to be a probability that this is merely one more instance of blade failure due to cavitation. This phenomenon is known to be a potent cause of erosion of screw propellers and of the runners of centrifugal pumps and hydraulic turbines. Water hammer, due to collapsing vortices, can cause rapid breaking up of material by cavitation. Damage due to pitting of runners and propellers has been so serious that Prof. Wilhelm Spannhake, visiting professor of hydraulics at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is now conducting experiments on cavitation for a prominent utility company.

If our Russian comrades will construct a scale model of the Dnieprostroi turbines, and operate this model in a manner to approximate the actual working conditions, they may, perhaps, learn that neither acid nor sand is at all necessary; that clean water can of itself cause severe damage to the blading.

Undoubtedly sabotage is sometimes an ugly fact; and one need not look to Russia for examples. The immense damage which is the result of human ignorance is, however, vastly greater than any which is knowingly wrought by sabotage. Never does ignorance exact greater toll than when politicians or demagogues, who know nothing of the fundamental principles, are allowed to operate the machinery of government.

Chicago, March 23.—We get our beer back at one minute after midnight on April 6, or, more properly, the beginning of April 7. George Washington was elected first President of the United States on April 6, 1789. The battle of Shiloh was on April 6, 1862. OUR SECRET AMBITION

JAPAN'S FUTURE AIMS PERIL U. S., CHEN DECLARES

Americans Must Intervene in Strife, He Says.

BY JOHN POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, March 26.—Failure of the league of nations to check Japanese aggression in China has created a situation "where America, willingly or unwillingly, will be compelled to intervene," Eugene Chen, Chinese foreign minister until 1932, declared tonight in a document issued by the Kuomin [government] news service.

Chen, who was educated in England, argued that unless the United States did intervene Japan's military would continue to break the American supported open door policy, the nine power pact protecting the territorial integrity of China, and the Kellogg anti-war pact. He gave four reasons—strategic, juristic, economic, and international—for thinking the United States would intervene.

He declared that Japan's major object is to frustrate an Anglo-American naval combination in the Pacific, thus enabling Japan to consolidate its position on the Asiatic mainland in preparation for a decisive war against the United States.

Resent Exclusion.

He alleged that Japan's preparations for war with America are just as deliberate as were Japan's preparations for the 1895 Sino-Japanese war and the 1905 Russo-Japanese war. He ridiculed Japanese claims that possession of Manchuria was a life and death necessity economically and as a barrier against the soviets.

Chen asserted Japan is smarting under America's refusal to grant Japanese racial equality and the right to settle on the Pacific coast.

The Anglo-Japanese alliance, although abrogated ten years ago during the Washington naval conference, continues to be a determining principle for British policy with regard to Japan, Chen pointed out.

In his opinion the Japanese objective both in China and in the South Sea mandate islands is to "drive the American fleet from the Pacific." He designated Japan's violation of far eastern treaties as an "intolerable outrage against America and the civilized world."

Use War Debts as Club.

Chen declared that America has the power in present war debt negotiations with Great Britain and France to compel those nations to coöperate with the United States in forcing Japan's disarmament, which must be accomplished before the world is able to return to peace, prosperity, and a civilized relationship.

The present tendency in the world toward economic security of individuals and international security among nations, Chen asserted, will be frustrated as long as so-called modern Japan is controlled by a medieval shogunate, a ruling class which he compared with "savages armed with machine guns."

Hence, Chen concluded, America's moral duty is to demand in exchange for an adjustment of war debts European coöperation to compel Japan to observe treaties to disarm and become a law abiding state, accomplishing the Wilsonian ideal of America's manifest destiny. This action, Chen thinks, would give the United States a predominant position in far eastern trade, which is now stifled due to Japan's closing and monopoly of the markets.

No Direct Negotiations.

PEIPING, March 26.—(AP)—Despite Tokio's assurance that the Japanese have no intention of proceeding south of the great wall, the possibility of an attempt to occupy the Peiping-Tientsin area cannot yet be precluded, Ho Ying-chin, Chinese minister of war, said tonight.

Denying reports that direct negotiations were imminent with the Japanese, the minister said:

"The Chinese government regards the present Sino-Japanese controversy a matter between the league of nations and Japan, and will not consider any kind of direct negotiations for settlement of any question, political or military, with Japan individually."

CHINA HONORS Y.M.C.A. OFFICIAL FOR DARING HELP TO REFUGEES

SHANGHAI, March 26.—(AP)—George Fitch, general secretary of the foreign Young Men's Christian association of Shanghai, has been decorated by the Chinese government in recognition of his relief work among the Chapei refugees a year ago. This was during fighting between Japanese and Chinese at Shanghai.

Fitch repeatedly risked his life by going into battle zones and leading to safety Chinese unable to escape.

The decoration is an elaborate silver tablet, mounted on a blackwood stand and bearing an inscription expressing the Chinese government's appreciation. Fitch also was presented with a "van ming shaw," an umbrella of 10,000 names, signifying that he had given assistance and protection to a large number of persons.

PHILIPPINES TURN BIG DEFICIT INTO MILLION SURPLUS

Need Free Trade with the U. S., Roosevelt Warns.

MANILA, P. I., March 26.—(AP)—Gov. Gen. Theodore Roosevelt today reported that the Philippine government had managed in 1932 to convert a yawning deficit into a $1,000,000 surplus, but coupled with this a warning that had the islands not enjoyed a duty free market with the United States a heavily unfavorable balance of trade would have resulted.

Mr. Roosevelt, now en route to the United States, included figures to this effect in his annual report to the secretary of war, made public today. He refrained, however, from expressing directly an opinion as to whether the Philippines should accept the Hawes-Cutting bill to provide independence for the islands.

Balances the Budget.

On matters general to his stewardship, Roosevelt reported that despite the world economic crisis the Philippines in 1933 "will have a balanced budget." He paid high tribute to the insular cabinet and legislature for managing this in the face of a $3,500,000 deficit for 1931, the general shrinkage of revenues, and the disappearance of markets.

"Acting in the closest and most harmonious coöperation," he said, "the legislature and the executive meet this situation fairly. We reorganized the government on lines of economy and efficiency. We revised the tax laws. We instituted a protective tariff. We dismissed all possible personnel. And we cut the salaries of all employés from 5 to 20 per cent."

In discussing trade matters Roosevelt included a warning that the economic situation of the islands "though it may seem fair from a superficial glance, is perilous when studied." He stressed particularly the trade advantage gained for the Philippines by the present duty free market with the United States.

Stresses Need of U. S. Trade.

"Without the trade with the United States the balance of trade stands against the Philippine islands to the extent of $16,000,000," he added. "This is not all. Approximately $61,000,000 of exports to the United States represents sugar and its products. Therefore 63 per cent of the total exports is sugar.

"Without sugar the trade of the Philippine islands would show an unfavorable balance in 1932 of $44,500,000.

"In view of the possibility that by accepting the Hawes-Cutting bill the Philippines may become an independent nation without the advantage of free trade with the United States, these figures assume a very grave significance. It must be assumed that with the termination of free trade relationships most of the present volume of exports to the United States will be cut off."

JAPAN FORMALLY QUITS LEAGUE OVER MANCHURIA

TOKIO, March 27 [Monday].—(AP)—The privy council unanimously approved today a communication to the league of nations announcing Japan's formal resignation from the league. The document will be telegraphed to Geneva this afternoon. Under the covenant the resignation becomes effective after two years.

The action is the climax of an 18 months' dispute regarding Japanese activities in Manchuria, for which Japan was condemned by the league in February. The announcement of the withdrawal, drawn up at a meeting in the imperial palace, said "the Japanese government has come to the conclusion that it can no longer coöperate with the league." The communication does not mention the mandated islands in the Pacific, which once belonged to Germany and over which Japan was given supervisory powers by the league.

Sixteen Chicago lads, trained to a hair and fighting for the joy of it, will meet the pride of New York, sixteen other youngsters who have battled their way through round after round of preliminary bouts. It will be a fight to a finish from the first bell, clean, hard scrapping which will keep the crowd roaring and on its feet.

This year's tournament will break the tie between the teams. New York has won two; Chicago has won two. One ended in a tie. Each boy will go into the ring to give all he has. And the knowledge that they are fighting in their own town, with their own folks cheering behind them, will inspire the Chicago team to exceptional effort.

If you have been at an Inter-city Tournament, you won't miss next Wednesday's show. You won't miss the fights, the thrills, the crowds. And if you have not as yet attended, set aside next Wednesday night for one of the best evenings of your life.

One Problem of Marriage Gifts Solved

Bureaus Help in Avoiding Duplication.

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

After the tissue and white satin ribbon, what then? This is the story of wedding presents, the fate of precious things given, from oil lamps to oyster forks, davenports to dictionaries.

Mrs. William J. Chalmers, a Victorian bride, now one of the most beloved hostesses in Chicago society found most of the gifts that came on her wedding day at the bottom of the Chicago river, where they had been thrown by a thief, when she returned from an extended honeymoon. The rest she has today. Mrs. Edwin L. Lobdell, another bride of the eighties, has furnishings in her Prairie avenue home she wouldn't part with for gold. They were wedding presents.

Mrs. Charles S. Dewey feels the same way about her silverware and Mrs. Walter S. Brewster has pleasant memories when she uses some of her china. Although Mrs. James Herbert Mitchell received quantities of plates . . . every variety, salad, dinner, and dessert . . . and dozens of ash trays when she was married, she wouldn't feel "furnished" without any one of them.

Contrary to the opinions of many, society's brides cling fondly to their wedding presents through generations. For the sake of sentimentality they prefer to ponder over the effective distribution of a half dozen mantel clocks and several dozen silver candlesticks rather than injure the feelings of an uncle several times great or half a dozen friends.

Fortunately, however, for today's bride the problem of duplicates has been solved, or at least partially so, by the wedding present bureau . . . that cross between a social secretary and a salesman. Modern girls are protected against 15 boudoir lamps and two dozen bread trays. They are even assured of some things practical.

Take, for instance, the pink floor mop that awaits the return of Mrs. Malcolm Henderson [the former Paula Wilms] from an English honeymoon. One of her practical minded friends thought of it as "something different and inexpensive." Mrs. Henderson was delighted.

When Miss Florence Crane was wed to William Albert Robinson one month ago, Mrs. Crane requested friends of the family to send personal rather than "regulation" presents. She was keeping in mind the five family homes already furnished as far as dishes and glassware, silver, and rugs were concerned. She was also mindful of the fact that Mrs. Robinson is to live in comparative simplicity in a small apartment in New York City.

Another bride of recent months, Mrs. Sydney Heyworth Heap, is still congratulating herself on the pleasant variety of her wedding gifts. When she moves to a house in the country soon she will save an especial place for her favorite present, the handsome Georgian tea service that once belonged to the Duke of Norfolk. It was the gift of Mr. Heap's family.

"The only presents that came by the dozen," Mrs. Heap explains, "were silver bowls. But I haven't minded a bit. Somehow it is the personal thought I appreciate most in a gift, and this is certainly destroyed when exchanges are made."

Mrs. Chalmers, whose presents were taken from her Ashland boulevard home while she was away on her honeymoon and tossed into the Chicago river by the thief when apprehended, shares Mrs. Heap's "wedding gift" theory. Exchange of a present, she believes, is a breach of etiquette. The few things that escaped the burglar who ransacked Allan Pinkerton's home she has today. Frequently she sets her table with two handsome silver guardsmen that were a bridal gift. In her Lake Shore drive living room are two overstuffed chairs that were presents, "the worst type of 50 years ago," she explains, "but there is the sentimental attachment."

Mrs. Lobdell has kept for half a century two of the dozen or more oil lamps given her when she was married. They were a novelty in that day. Now they are electrified . . . one a Greek pattern done in bronze, the other, a Japanese vase.

Both Mrs. Dewey and Mrs. Brewster agree that they belong to the silver era as far as wedding presents are concerned. The Dewey table is still spread with the service that was given to Mrs. Dewey as a bride and Mrs. Brewster makes use of much of her "bridal" china as well as silver. Mrs. Brewster, incidentally, is one of those who believe we are becoming more sentimental as far as wedding presents are concerned. They are fewer and simpler today than a few years ago, she explains, but more sentiment is going into their selection.

If wedding present bureaus had been functioning when Mrs. Mitchell was a bride she might have been spared a few plates or ash trays. But, as she points out, "they've been mighty useful. There wasn't anything really evil among my gifts." Eight dictionaries were among the duplicates that came to Mrs. Cabot Brown, the sister of Mrs. Graham Aldis, at the time of her wedding.

It is a well known bachelor here in town, however, who considers a wedding present bureau indispensable. "My secretary calls and leaves the name of the bride," he explains. "A few days later a card arrives saying that I have sent a mirror or perhaps a lamp. That's all there is to it. The card saves me embarrassment. When the bride is enthusiastic I can be intelligent."

The Field Museum of Natural History press today publishes the first comprehensive report on one of the primitive peoples of Madagascar from intimate studies of the Marshall Field ethnological expedition to Madagascar. The book, "The Tanala, a Hill Tribe of Madagascar," was written by Dr. Ralph Linton, head of the expedition which spent two years on the island. Good Morning!

I like Sylvia Sidney and George Raft in this picture!

They — especially Sylvia — seem so sure of themselves! They play with such admirable reticence and give evidence of having lavished so much constructive thought on roles that aren't remarkable for originality and don't offer a great deal of opportunity for self-expression.

"Pick Up," from a Vina Delmar story, would probably classify as romantic melodrama. It concerns: as do the rank and file of this author's works, the so-called "common people." In reality her "commonest" character here is a little daughter of the rich, with a highbrow accent and the morals of an alley cat. Miss Delmar points out this fact shrewdly via a remark by the hero:

"Mary told me there was a difference between a lady and a pick up! YOU'RE the pickup!"

The young garage owner, you see, had been flattered by this playgirl's attentions to the point of deserting his Mary whom, as a taxi driver he had "picked up"—though not in the way you surmise—and asking Lillian to marry him.

"My dear boy—you are TOO funny . . . !"

The picture's opening scenes occur in the penitentiary where Mary Richards is about to be set free. She and her husband, Jim, had been tried and convicted of participating in a badger game that had resulted in the suicide of the victim—a man of family. Though Mary was innocently involved and had told a straightforward story on the witness stand, she had not convinced a jury.

She leaves the "big house" determined to cut loose from the old life and her former associates—including her husband. This she tells Jim, who has more time to serve and who has been granted a brief ten minutes with his wife before her departure. He furiously starts to lay hands on her, is prevented by guards and goes out cursing, and vowing to find her wherever she may hide . . .

In the big city, the rain pours down, a determined stranger stalks a little girl who is drenched, homeless and hungry. At bay, "Baby Face Mary" hops into an idle taxi for refuge.

"Where to, Lady?"
"Boulder Dam . . . or Topeka . . ."
"Get OUTA there . . .!"
Well—this is "the pickup."
See pix for t. h.

The film is well directed and acted throughout with William Harrigan, Lillian Bond and Robert McWade as highlights in the supporting cast.

Mr. Raft knows himself! He was wise, I think, in refusing the rôle in "The Story of Temple Drake" which he felt would make him loathesome in the eyes of an audience majority. As Harry Glynn, he shows aptitude and pull in a part as different as possible from the gangster rôles with which he has been associated. He's no Romeo, but rightly cast and let alone he knows how to make love in a forth right, he-man, human fashion that is a heap more appealing to some women than the creamy, perfumed wooings of the stereotyped screen lover.

And, please, DON'T fail to study Sylvia Sidney's impersonation. I think it's a knockout!

You'll have a good time at the Chicago while "The Pickup" is on the screen, and will I'm sure enjoy the stage show, headliners of which are Mills Brothers, and Don Redman and his radio orchestra—hot from Harlem.

North Shore Girls to Carry Daisy Chain

Miss Dorothy Darby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond J. Darby of Winnetka, will be one of the 24 sophomores at Vassar college who will carry the traditional daisy chain at the class day exercises next June. The girls who bear the rope of daisies gathered from the fields round about Poughkeepsie are judged the prettiest in the second year class.

Sophomores at Vassar college have chosen Miss Elizabeth Eckhart, daughter of the Percy B. Eckharts of Kenilworth, one of the two dozen prettiest girls in their class. Miss Eckhart wins this distinction by election to the list of sophomores who will carry the daisy chain.

The New Hats Have Veils of Fragile Mesh

Stylish Feminine Trifles Prove Flattering.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Future hat fashions are veiled . . . funny hats, dizzy hats, goofy lids, and all of the erratic headgear, so close to the heart of all shoppers who are heartily sick of everything serious and dull . . . are veiled! Skylines and headlines and seductive eyelines are veiled, not with the thick opaque chiffons of a Turkish beauty, but with enchanting, airy trifles that are as flattering as a bit of cobwebby lace.

Until you have shopped seriously for veils and delightedly discovered all the intriguing new ideas that you can pin, wind, or otherwise decorate your newest bonnet, you have overlooked plenty of thrills.

Veils are fragile and feminine this spring. Gone are the coarse, fish net affairs, the mosquito netting swathings that cluttered up the outlines of a thick winter hat . . . now you find bits of shadowy nets, delicate meshes covered with shadow traceries of patterns in vines and slender leaves . . . or the misty, airy veils with fuzzy little chenille dots of black or contrasting colors.

And the colored veils offer limitless possibilities for the ingenious gal who hides behind a veil of contrast. Vivid scarlet veils, pale silvery veils, powder blue, and mauve tints are but a few of what you will find. And while you are shopping for colors listen to the findings of a research expert about flattering colors for the great majority . . . according to the best official pie charts, brown veils are the most becoming to Chicago complexions . . . black seems to be a bit too heavy unless a very vivid beauty wears them. Brown veils blend with all makeups, for after these brown wisps are tied over any color of eye the brown tint seems to vanish and a very soft, dark shadow accents the wise gal who veils her glances under short brims or even brimless models.

The newest veiling is in circular formation, with a fetching little bow that can be perched coquettishly high at the left side . . . day veils and evening veils are merely different in delicacy of mesh. Smart new circle veils are designed to wear over the entire hat and, of course, that hat must be small and skull hugging in outline.

Again the white chenille dots are used for dramatic contrast . . . the top or center of these perfect circles have a ring of white dots, then a row of similar white dots marches around the lower edge ending in ripples around the vicinity of the shoulders.

You can buy narrow circular veils to tie around your smart flowered turbans . . . sleek, stiffened veils to soften the rigid outlines of your pet pill box and visor veils that are just what they sound like [double layers of stiffened net to be sewed into a hat] to stick out as a transparent accent shaped and curved and cut like the visor of your young brother's cap.

The most spectacular contrast of the season will be chalk white hats of satin, linen, and straw, draped with eye veils of black . . . thin sheer wisps of filmy black fashioned with threads that look like shadows against a pale new moon. These new lace veils are as long and as fragile as heirloom lace . . . when you own one you will pin it to your hat over the front and around to each side, from there the long ends are brought down under your chin, to be tied in a soft bow, with the two longer ends hanging well down to your waistline.

With new spring veilings the lovely ladies of mystery and charm will return, for nothing achieves greater allure and charm than thin scraps of net, lace, and fine mesh to mask the eyes of the knowing veil collector.

Scotch Scones May Be Griddle or Oven Baked

Crunchiness Calls for Jam Accompaniment.

BY MARY MEADE.

Just why some romantic soul decided to christen Scotland the "Land o' Cakes," is still a mystery to a great many knowing gourmets.

But scones—there's a family to be talked about by itself. And while scones likely should be classed as Scottish cakes, their crisp crunchiness under jam or marmalade and the round or three sided effect these cakelets assume surely takes off the ban.

Actually, scones are second cousins to our hot morning biscuits, and like them, they may be converted into a main dish accompaniment or a dessert by a few simple maneuvers. As for pronunciation—authorities vary. The dictionary at my right recommends that I pronounce my scones with a long "o." But I suspect it. For on good Celtic authority I am told that the true Scotchman gives his "o" a short sound as in the word "not," and will raise eyebrows at any other pronunciation.

Various scones come from the land of the bagpipes. Oatmeal scones, barley scones, wheat scones, and oven scones are popular hot breads. Then there are soda scones, treacle scones, "drappies" or drop scones, and "tatie" or potato scones. But here our American hot biscuits and the Scotch scones go different ways, for back in the days before gas burners almost all scones got their crunchiness from the tops of iron griddles set or swung over open fires. Today this method is still popular, though oven scones are likewise approved.

Now for recipes. The following Scotch standbys will start scones at your house—and the family will do the rest.

SCOTCH SCONES.

3 tablespoons butter.
3 teaspoons baking powder.
2-3 cups milk.
2 tablespoons sugar [optional].

Sift the dry ingredients. Cut in the butter and work it in with knives or finger tips until the mixture is mealy. Add enough of the milk to form a soft dough. Real Scotch scones frequently omitted the sugar entirely, but for most of our palates, sugar gives a pleasant flavor addition. Or, if you are interested in having a richer scone, add one or two eggs to the batter, saving out a little of the egg white for a glaze.

Now divide the dough in half and roll out both halves into rounds, about one-half inch thick, on a floured board. Cut each round in fourths, forming fat lop sided triangles, and place on a floured sheet. Brush the tops with egg white or milk and bake in a moderately hot oven [375 degrees Fahrenheit] for from ten to fifteen minutes. For smaller scones, divide the dough into thirds and cut each third into fourths as directed. Serve these scones very hot, split, and buttered.

OATMEAL SCONES.

3 tablespoons butter.
1 1-3 cups flour.
4 tablespoons baking powder.
2½ tablespoons sugar.

Scald the milk and pour it over the oatmeal. Stir in the butter till dissolved, then let cool. Meanwhile sift the flour, baking powder, sugar, and salt together, and when the oatmeal is cold, combine the two mixtures. Blend carefully, then roll out as for plain scones or roll out all at once and cut in diamond shapes. Bake these scones on a hot greased griddle or bake in a moderately hot oven [370 degrees Fahrenheit] for fifteen minutes.

Civic Orchestra Gives Another Good Concert

Goes Far Beyond Purpose as Training Group.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

The Civic orchestra, carrying on its series of concerts at Orchestra hall, appeared again yesterday afternoon under the direction of Eric DeLamarter, and did some of the best playing heard since the orchestra was founded.

Organized originally for the purpose of giving talented students the training and routine of orchestral experience, it has gone a considerable distance beyond being merely a students' orchestra. It plays expertly and efficiently, and is in a fair way to develop a personality of its own. Glazounow's Sixth Symphony, which began the concert, belongs in the second flight of symphonic writings, but it has many pleasant moments in its course, and these were brought out and emphasized in an ingratiating manner.

The Civic orchestra, however, does not deal with the remnants and leftovers of orchestral literature. It presses eagerly into new works, like Turina's Two Fantastic Dances, even to a novelty like Pedrotti's "The Dying Soldier," a first American performance wherein George Sopkin played the violin obbligato. The soloists of the afternoon were Carl Racine, violin, and Joseph Kovacs, viola, who gave a first rate performance of Mozart's Symphonie Concertante for their two instruments. The program closed with Tschaikowsky's "1812" Overture.

Arranges Parties as Welcome; Some Hail Return of Steins as Sign of More Romantic Days.

BY JUDITH CASS.

IN THE midst of this lectureful Lenten season comes beer, that drink with an ancestry venerable as Egypt's pyramids, with an excuse to talk and think about parties. In fact the plebeian brew is assuming something of a patrician character as society is planning to fête its arrival at 12 o'clock the night of April 6 and from then on well into the spring.

There is something romantic about this revival, it was agreed during the week-end over a dozen smart luncheon and dinner tables. "Instead of a gin veneer," as one well known matron expressed it, "we are getting down to things that are more sincere and healthy. All that I want now is some of the lovely old feather boas, the hoops and the ruffles that used to complete the perfect beer garden picture."

The night of April 6 will be something of a New Year's eve. Due to the fact, however, that breweries will not make their deliveries until midnight, the older and more conservative members of society agree that they will delay their first steins of legal beer until the 7th, leaving the midnight celebration up to the debutantes their beaux, and the young marrieds.

The biggest party announced so far is the open house the Tavern club is to have on the seventh from 12 o'clock noon until the last drop has been drained from the barrels already on order. For this occasion the club management has voted to relax its rule that no ladies are admitted until tea time. "Come and make merry," say the officers. "Again we have beer."

The Cliff Dwellers has not as yet determined the character its celebration will assume. It is a fact, however, that the old Heidelberg steins that have decorated the dining room mantel for many a month have been relegated to the cellar for a good cleaning. At the Casino there is also a supply of mugs now being put in order.

The nearest approach of anything in town to the old German beer garden always pleasantly associated with sabers and duels, will undoubtedly be the old Heidelberg inn being erected on the grounds of A Century of Progress. Already two groups have planned parties to celebrate the opening. The Southern Woman's Education alliance will have the first the evening of April 29 and the Lighthouse Volunteer Aids a second on May 13. There are to be German barmaids to serve the food and draw the beer and plenty of big round topped tables to be christened with carved initials.

Expect Gay Parties at Ben Marshall's.

And speaking of carved initials, Ben Marshall will undoubtedly have a round of beer parties this spring out at his "wonder" studio on the lake in Wilmette. For there he has a café fitted with a rough hewn table in which the name of more than one celebrity has been burned. In a tiny adjoining room is a bar, brass rail and all.

The Charles H. Morses are another family in line for some successful beer parties, for society has not yet forgotten the gay gathering with beer [it was "near" then], they had last fall.

In practice for a home party, Mrs. Arthur Cutten is repeating at the Illinois Garden club show, to open Friday on Navy pier, the "whims and fancies" table she set last year at the Wheaton Garden club show. It has a red checked cloth, heavy steins, every one of them different, and pretzels and cheese [though Mrs. Cutten doesn't promise to keep the pretzel and cheese at the garden show a whole week].

The young crowd in town has been having some lively times recently at a little restaurant on the near north side, that has been dressed up like a beer garden in the Austrian Tyrol in preparation for the revival. Stewart Boal, who has just returned from a business trip east, was there the other evening with his house mate, Walter Egan Trevvett, at a table covered with red checks. Soon they were joined by Miss Mary Fortune and her fiancé, William J. Lawlor Jr.; her brother, John L. Fortune Jr.; Floyd Hunt, and his younger brother, William Hunt; Miss Martha Fitts, the junior Murray P. Brushes, Miss Helen

The Changeling Bride

By Martha Ostenso

SYNOPSIS.

The Hendersons—Meryl and Margaret, sisters; Flint, their older brother, and Andrew, the father—have lived for twelve years in poverty in a fishing settlement on the shores of Lake Superior, after losing their fortune in Chicago. Andrew went to pieces after the death of his wife. Great-Aunt Letitia, formerly dean of a girls' school in Ohio, is the liaison between the Hendersons and a cultured past. Flint and his friend, Ned Bremner, hope to build up a great export business. Ned is in love with Meryl, but she dreams of a better future. A forest fire brings Blake Lawrence, injured and lost, to the Henderson cottage. There were two great names in nearby Agate Bay and its environs—Lawrence and Greer. Blake is in love with Greer's wife, Christine. Blake's broken ankle keeps him two weeks with the Hendersons. Meryl falls in love with Blake. Though still enamored of Christine, Blake becomes engaged to Meryl, and sends for his sister, Theresa, to meet her.

INSTALLMENT XIII.

FAREWELL .O GIRLHOOD.

"You're unpredictable, Tess," Blake laughed. "As a matter of fact, it's all set for tomorrow."

"But the girl will need some clothes," Theresa protested.

"You can get those after we're married," Blake told her briefly.

Theresa restrained a chuckle. Poor Blake! How grimly he was going into this thing.

"Well, then," she said in a matter of fact tone, "I'll take her shopping in the city afterwards and get her whatever she needs in Agate Bay for the th - being. It'll be fun dressing her. She has a lovely figure." There, it was o t. Theresa thought with dismay. She hated to be caught sentimentalizing. It was a bit unworthy of a Lawrence. "What about your honeymoon?"

He looked at her with a crestfallen face. "Lord—I hadn't thought of it!"

"You hadn't thought of it? If you had married Edna Maitland as I hoped you might you would have taken her to the Fiji islands and spent the winter falling in love with her."

"Meryl doesn't expect anything like that," Blake countered.

"Hell! I want to!" Blake exclaimed. "I just hadn't given it any thought. Give me a little time."

She looked at him and smiled. Men of Blake's caliber had distressingly single track minds, she thought to herself.

For ten or fifteen minutes he played for her.

"I'm getting chilly," she complained, and got to her feet. "Let's go to the house. I have my obeisance to make to my new in-laws, I suppose."

"You don't have to be so damned lofty about it," Blake burst forth suddenly. "They're good people. Andrew Henderson was a publisher of de luxe editions before he failed in business."

"Good! He and I will get along. But how on earth did he happen to stow himself away here?"

Blake shrugged. "I'll do it myself if I ever fail."

"No, you won't," she argued. "You may be a damned fool in some respects, but if you ever fail—in anything—you'll stick and get it back before you quit. You have enough of the Lawrence in you for that."

"Rot!" Blake exclaimed. "Nothing is worth it."

"I may remind you of that some time," Theresa said, not knowing quite why she said it.

Big Peter Palka, the Finn, and his delicate younger brother, Ola, who lived north of the Point and inland on the wood road, had come perilously near to being burned out in the recent fire. Their squat log house and their few outbuildings looked gaunt and lonely now in the clearing, with the charred masts of trees standing darkly against the yellowing evening sky to the south and west.

Bidding farewell to Pete and Ola symbolized to Meryl more than did any other thing her farewell to her girlhood. She would see them again, of course, just as she would see her own family. But there would be a difference. They would probably become shy and reserved with her, knowing that she had been whisked off in a trice from the poor ken of the shore people. Meryl could not help feeling a pang of wistfulness at the thought, and wondered, as she turned in at their path, how she could keep unspoiled the friendship of these two.

A film of smoke rising from their chimney assured her that they had returned from the sawmill and were probably making supper.

Big Pete, dark and ferocious looking when his face was in repose, opened the door to her with a smile that gave him the winning candor of a child.

"Mer—yl:" he greeted her. "You have not been here a long time now. Come in!"

She entered, and Ola, who was busy at the cookstove, wiped his hands on a towel and come forward eagerly. He was slight and blond, with the high cheekbones of a Finn and the elliptically shaped eyes. His hands were remarkably fine and nervous.

Meryl looked from one to the other of the brothers and smiled uneasily. It seemed all at once vastly important that they should not think ill of her for deserting the shore.

"I've come to say good-by to you," she said.

"What? You are going away?"

"I am going to be married," Meryl told them, smiling up at Pete's great bulk.

"Married!" Ola exclaimed. "Ha—I knew it! Ned is the lucky feller!"

"Not Ned?"

"I'm going to marry Blake Lawrence," she replied.

Ola and Pete looked at each other blankly.

"Blake Lawrence?" Pete said. "He is good friend to Julius Greer."

"I—I suppose they are friends," Meryl said. It didn't seem right that they should be friends. "But Blake isn't the same sort at all, Pete."

Pete looked at once humbled and disturbed. "I cannot think it," he said, looking at the floor. "They are not your people. They are rich. They trample and kill."

Meryl laughed deprecatingly. "Why, Pete!" she protested. "Blake wouldn't kill a fly if he could help it. You'll like him. Some time I'll bring him out to see you. He'll like you and Ola just as much as I do."

Peter shook his head somberly.

"I can only stay a minute," Meryl went on. "I have so much to do at home before I go, but I had to come and say good-by to you. And Ola—won't you play just one piece for me? Let it be—'Die Lorelei.'"

Ola, looking perplexed, took his violin from its shabby case beside the cupboard. For ten or fifteen minutes he played for her, and she sat in the shadowed kitchen with tears falling unchecked down her face. Ola became unearthly when he played his violin. When he had played "Die Lorelei" he turned to "Anitra's Dance" and a little Finnish lullaby which his mother had sung to him somewhere north of the arctic circle.

When he was done he looked vaguely across the dimness at Meryl. She got to her feet impulsively and went to him and kissed his cheek.

"Good-by, Ola," she said breathlessly. "Don't let me hear any more, or I shan't be able to go."

Then she turned to Peter, who stood apart with his arms folded. "Good-by, Peter," she said, and tried to smile. "Remember—in the spring!"

Meryl ran out of the log house and down to the road not clearly knowing why she ran. The light was falling on the charred skeletons of the trees beyond the clearing, making them brightly black as a crow's wing.

Autos of Two Film Stars Will Try for Record

Lilian Harvey Challenges Gary Cooper.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., March 26.—[Special.]—Hearing that her new American friend, Gary Cooper, was getting his blue and yellow low hung, high powered auto tuned up by a local automobile agency for an assault on existing stock car records at Modoc Dry Lake, Lilian Harvey has sent Gary a challenge to race her car against Gary's for a substantial wager to be agreed later.

Lilian's is an imported German speedster and it will be driven by her own chauffeur, Gustav Boehm, former test driver for the Mercedes-Benz works abroad, who was a German war aviator. Lilian's auto, which she brought to this country with her, is a poem of machinery in white and black, and is said to have a speed of 200 kilometers an hour [137 miles]. Gary's pet was supposed to be capable of 122 miles per hour before the auto works took it to tune it up. A professional auto racer will be at the wheel for Cooper.

Mary Kornman, whom many remember as a curly haired child beauty in "Our Gang," gets her biggest part to date as ingenue lead with Jack Oakie and Richard Arlen in "College Humor" at Paramount. Her hair is still curly, but not so long.

Paramount announces that Babe Ruth has signed a short specialty appearance in the Peggy Joyce film, "International House." Director Eddie Sutherland will boss the Babe's shots on Eddie's current trip to the east.

Ray Wise, actor, who, like Anna May Wong's little sister, Lulu Wong Ying, was taken north to play a part in the MGM film "Eskimo," used to be a cameraman here, and is really part Jewish and part Eskimo by birth. He was found as an actor by chance, working one of the cameras on a set when Ewing Scott, director for "Igloo," happened to learn he was part Eskimo and put him in that film. The rôle in "Eskimo" with W. S. Van Dyke followed.

Romeo Nunaruik, an Eskimo brought from Alaska by Van Dyke last week, can't speak English, but interpreters explained he got his first name from a schooner captain with a set of Shakespeare in his cabin. Romeo is one of the natives brought here by MGM studio under a deal with the Alaskan Indian superintendent, an agreement having been signed to send them all back home in good health, and amply paid.

Buster Keaton gave the pavement crowd, as well as his dressy movie brethern and sistern, an unusual sight at the gala coast opening of "King Kong," when he drove up to the Chinese theater in a motorcycle with his new wife [or isn't she his wife, technically, until the divorce from Natalie Talmadge becomes final?] and ex-nurse, May Scribben, in a white evening gown, in the motorcycle sidecar.

A FRIEND IN NEED

If you are in need, perhaps I can help you. If you have household articles or clothing you can no longer use, please tell me. I can place such things with needy families. Address Sally Joy Brown, The Tribune, Chicago.

Chance to Help a Student.

"I am a young girl of seventeen and have been attending night school. Unless I can get some books I need I shall have to discontinue, and I should hate to do so. Do you think one of your readers could supply me with them? The books are 'Miller's Dictaphone and Typewriting Book' and '20th Century Bookkeeping and Accounting.' I should like to have the intermediate and introductory series, if possible. L. K."

If you used these text books in your business course and no longer have need of them, perhaps you'd like to pass them on to this student so that she can continue her school work. I know she'd be grateful for your help.

MINUTE MYSTERY CAN YOU SOLVE IT?

BY H. A. RIDLEY

[Copyright 1933: By The Chicago Tribune.]

GANGWAY FOR A SAILOR.

"How that old ship rolled and tossed—first to the right, then to the left. As able a seaman as I was, it fair put 'the wind up' me. I was standing near the bow and had just started for the back of the ship when a giant wave thirty feet high hit us almost broadside and I was thrown against a lifeboat. Broke a leg, smashed two ribs and got this ugly scar on my forehead," continued the garrulous passenger who had been regaling the professor with his adventures.

Fordney was crossing to London and had hoped to keep his identity unknown. Even with his overcoat turned up and cap pulled down he had been recognized by his talkative shipmate. Fordney liked people but would have preferred to be alone. He was tired.

"And then . . ." but this time he interrupted his companion.

"English, aren't you, Mr. Crosscup?"

"I'm not the one to deny that, sir," came the rather belligerent reply.

"Well, you'll pardon me, Mr. Crosscup," Fordney emphasized the last name slightly, "here's my cabin—I have some writing to do."

"Certainly. See you in the lounge later."

"Mr. Crosscup, eh," he mused. "Well, he made a mistake in recognizing me. Can't quite figure him yet but I know he has something to hide. That story—bah!—English is he, well——"

Marie Castle, Miss Jean Hyman, and Richard K. Juergens.

Mr. Boal and Miss Fitts were star exponents of the Viennese waltz in its fanciest form and several of the waiters, clad in German peasant costumes, helped their customers make the "welkin ring" with that old favorite, "Ist das nicht ein Schwitzelbank."

Visit Telephone Plant on Party.

Unusual parties recall the experience a group of young north siders had the other evening in search of education and entertainment in a fifty-fifty ratio. They spent two hours following a guide through the telephone company's plant on West Washington street, seeing telephotos come through from New York, watching the teletype operate, and learning several of the more comprehensive details of the city's elaborate dial system.

The last day or so they have been repeating to their friends that a telephoto comes from New York or San Francisco in seven minutes, also that the busiest hours of the day on the switchboard are 10 to 12 in the morning and 4 to 5 in the afternoon.

In on this interesting party were, among others, Miss Honor Merrell, Miss Mildred Wetten, Alan Healy, Creighton Miller, Lloyd Kelly, and Newton Tobey.

Many Parties for Dr. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy.

With the celebrated composer, Felix Mendelssohn, for his grandfather and Moses Mendelssohn, the philosopher, for his great grandfather, in addition to all of his personal accomplishments it is no wonder that Dr. Albrecht Mendelssohn-Bartholdy is to be extensively entertained during his brief visit in Chicago.

Dr. Mendelsschn-Bartholdy arrives today from Milwaukee where he has been resting over the weekend. Tomorrow evening he will go out to Evanston to be the guest of Dr. Richard Sallet at a supper reception at the Georgian hotel before his first lecture at Harris hall at Northwestern university.

Dr. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy has come to Chicago to give two talks on "Democracy in Germany" and "The European Situation" for the Norman Wait Harris foundation at Northwestern. The second will be at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening.

On Wednesday afternoon the Harris foundation committee is having a reception and tea for him in the social room at Harris hall with Mme. Rita Rothermel as the artist. Presiding at the tea table will be Mrs. Walter Dill Scott, Mrs. Robert Elliot, Mrs. William H. Barnes, and Mrs. Albert E. Cross.

Dr. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy will be back in town at the Drake hotel again on Thursday to give a third lecture before the law school of Northwestern university on the McKinlock campus. And for that evening and Friday he is to have Dr. Otto L. Schmidt and Lessing Rosenwald as his hosts.

Mrs. Wilhelm Ludwig Baum, who never misses entertaining a prominent German visitor, is winding up the guests' week here with a dinner party Saturday evening at her residence at 1508 North State parkway.

Dr. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy is recognized as one of the outstanding political figures in Germany, he is a professor of civil and international law at the University of Hamburg and director of the Institute of Foreign Affairs at Hamburg.

He is an accomplished musician and composer, having done among other things a musical interpretation of John Galsworthy's poem, "The Wind."

Mrs. Baum will be back in town Saturday just in time to receive her guests that evening for she is leaving today, provided all of the snow is melted, for a few days at her country home in Michigan. Her young son, Wilhelm Jr., home for the Easter holiday from Andover, is accompanying her.

Lillian Dudley Names New Dog.

Just why Lillian Dudley chose Lucrece as the name for her new pet is not perfectly clear to her friends, but Lucrece it is and it is that name that the little three months old toy Boston bull recognizes now. When she was Mary Boland's property she answered to the less classical name of Myrtle, but when Miss Boland left Chicago with "Face the Music" and returned the puppy to the kennels where she had bought it, the pup being too young for traveling with a theatrical company that expected to play in different cities every week, Miss Dudley saw it and bought it immediately and proceeded to change its name. She isn't sure whether she named the dog for Lucrece, the Roman senator's wife who was the heroine of the play translated by Thornton Wilder and recently produced in the east, or for Katharine Cornell who was the Lucrece of the short lived play.

Lucrece is too young to go outdoors yet so only those friends of Miss Dudley who have been at the Dudley apartment on Lake Shore drive recently have made the acquaintance of the cunning dog which is all white except for its head and tail, but as soon as the puppy is older and the weather more springlike Miss Dudley will join the ranks of dog exercisers and before and after her studies at the University of Chicago she and Lucrece will be seen on the drive.

Mentioning Thornton Wilder reminds us that that very popular young author and lecturer will be back in Chicago to stay all summer, early next month, which is good news to the university and near north side circles which "lionized" him so much when he was here last winter. At least they tried to make a "lion" of him, but he is so modest that it was impossible to do it.

Party Tonight For Lucie Jacobs

Miss Evelyn Bouscaren and Miss Chloe Watson will entertain tonight for Miss Lucie Jacobs and Willett N. Gorham, who are to be married Wednesday afternoon. About eighteen guests will meet first at the home of the Louis H. G. Bouscarens in Winnetka for cocktails and then the party will move on to the Cornelius B. Watsons' house for dinner and bridge.

To avoid conflicting parties Miss Welthyan Harmon has called off the cocktail party that she was to give this evening. Instead she will entertain for the couple when they return from their honeymoon.

The first of Miss Helen Tieken's prenuptial parties was a lingerie shower given Saturday afternoon by Mrs. William K. Logan of 229 Lake Shore drive. Miss Tieken's engagement to Maurice Patrick Geraghty was announced a week ago.

Melvin A. Traylor took his young son, Melvin A. Jr., home on vacation from school, down to Biloxi last week for ten days of sports and sunshine. Mrs. Traylor and Miss Nancy Traylor remained at home.

Edward I. Cudahy will open his house at 1501 North State parkway today for a talk by the Rt. Rev. Thomas V. Shannon. The lecture is one of the Chapel guild series. Father Shannon, who has been editor of the New World since 1914, is to discuss "Spain from Within: A Nation in Turmoil." The late Mrs. Cudahy was one of the most faithful workers for the Cenacle. She helped to found the guild and served as its president for many years.

A second Lenten program today is the musical the active members of the Lake View Musical society are to give at 2:30 in the French room of the Georgian hotel in Evanston. Hostesses for this affair will include Mrs. A. S. Van Deusen, Mrs. Edwin J. Randall, Mrs. R. F. Kelker, and Mrs. Louis Braddock.

Limber the Shoulder Muscles

Take the position of attention. Move the arms fully extended to the front of the body. 1A: On the count of 1 move the shoulders slowly forward as far as possible. 1B: On count 2 move them upward. 1C: On the count of 3 move them backward; and on count 4 down smartly to the original position.

West Pointers Keep Shoulders Limber, Strong

Daily Exercise Is the Best Method.

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Today we are in on the third week of this most excellent series of exercises inspired by the fine posture and general bearing of the West Point cadet and executed with the coöperation of physical training officers at the United States Military academy at West Point.

The first week was given over to stretching exercises to get the spinal column in condition, to improve the symmetry of the body and to supply such health, strength and vigor as is needed. The second week was devoted to neck exercises, so that neck muscles might be strengthened and thereby a better head carriage and a smarter, snappier general appearance be obtained.

Today shoulders are the point of attack. No need to dwell upon the common need of this corrective work. A minor percentage of people carry their shoulders in correct position, with the result that we see shoulder blades protruding like barn doors on rusty hinges, half open, giving a bad turn to the spinal column in this section of the anatomy.

We see humped up shoulders, round shoulders, often heavy with fat. It's a smart as well as a health giving carriage of the body we're out for. We want you to look young, carry yourself with an "air"; be somebody. The trick is not to tense, tighten or command your shoulders back, nor square them.

Instead, train those shoulder muscles to act easily, gracefully on their impetus, to strengthen the muscles of the shoulders and thus flatten the blades and remove fat therefrom and keep it off, and to fill up the hollows.

Tomorrow I'll tell you more about what good shoulders do for style, grace, beauty, and even personality.

Lecture Tonight.

Dr. A. E. Strath-Gordon of Scotland is to tell Chicagoans of playing cards in a lecture he is to give this evening in the recital hall at the Auditorium.

THE STAGE

George M. Cohan may be counted on as a contributor to spring theatrical activities in Chicago. He will begin an engagement here May 7 or 8 in his latest comedy, "Pigeons and People," which was well received in New York. The actor-author-manager is now on tour in this piece. Yesterday he moved from Boston to Washington. The week of April 24 will find him in Pittsburgh. Then, after half weeks in Cleveland and Detroit, he will come to Chicago. The theater for the engagement has not yet been selected.

The Broadway review called "Flying Colors" will come to Chicago in May [date indefinite] under a new title, which will probably be "High Time." The principal rôles will be recast and the company will be headed by a three-star combination of Beatrice Lillie, Norma Tallmadge, and George Jessell. This entertainment, staged by Max Gordon, has not been on tour since the termination of its New York run.

Monday, April 10, instead of Sunday, April 9, will be the date of the first performance of "Counsellor-at-Law's" return engagement in Chicago at the Apollo theater. This company will have Paul Muni in the central rôle.

Arrange Bridge Tourney for A Century of Progress

An entire wing of the Hall of Science at A Century of Progress will be given over to tournament bridge and to exhibits showing the evolution of bridge, it was announced yesterday by fair officials and George Reith, executive vice president of the United States Bridge association. Daily sessions at bridge will be preceded by half hour lectures by well known teachers. Exhibition matches will be played by internationally known experts, while an electrical board will show the audience the bidding and play.

It's Easy to Be Impudent to Certain People

Wise Parent Doesn't Provoke Rudeness in Child.

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

The woman, who was landlady of a remodeled house, had been away for the week-end. When she came back her maid told her of the defection of the furnace man in a cold spell and of the fact that her favorite tenant, a charming woman, had had to speak to him. The owner gathered that the furnace man had been objectionable and went to apologize.

"I'm so sorry," she said, "that Dickson was impudent to you, Mrs. Brown."

"O, you're mistaken," answered her tenant. "Dickson wasn't impudent to me. I wouldn't give him an opportunity to be."

By which she meant, of course, that she would never speak to him in such a way that he could reply impudently. She is a very jolly, informal woman, yet she has a native dignity, a natural poise which makes her conduct herself in a way that commands respect.

This is a bona fide incident. And while it may seem trifling to you, it is rather significant to me. I see an interesting parallel between this woman and the furnace man and some parents and their children.

Take note yourself of the parents who complain that their children are rude or impudent to them. If you could see them day in and day out with their boys and girls I can practically guarantee you'd find that those parents do something which calls forth such an attitude—that they do or say something that paves the way for impudence or rudeness on the children's part.

Of course, you must understand that I mean impudence or rudeness in intent. I'm not talking about the free and easy, rough and tumble off-hand speech or manners that often mark the fast growing boys and frequently girls at home. I'm not setting up any ideals that make it hard for you and the children, too—that they must behave like little Lord Chesterfields or Fauntleroys or Elsie Dinsmores or Polyannas. That would be too tiresome!

But what I am saying is that if your children are really impudent or rude to you you've probably called it forth by your own behavior. Take your cue from the woman and the furnace man. Don't give the children an opportunity to be impudent or rude.

Silver Spangles Embroider Cotton Frock from Paris

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Embroidery is coming back into style in Paris. It is used by the great dressmakers to add bright touches to daytime dresses, and Jean Patou, no less, is introducing it. Embroidered evening frocks, too, are in again, but they look different, O, so different!

Cotton evening frocks are being treated to voluptuous spangled embroidery, and Molyneux has given the world the most original of these dresses. He made it for Jeanette MacDonald, first of all, and it is shown in our sketch today. The material is a coarse, super-coarse, white cotton net, woven with three heavy threads in clusters, latticed vertically and horizontally. Then small silver spangles are sewed in broken rows all over the dress. The combined rustic and rich effect is what makes it new and exciting.

This dress has a siren-slim silhouette, of the utmost simplicity, which shows off the material to perfection and enhances the shapeliness of the wearer. The décolleté is round and slightly draped in front, and the skirt widens about half way down and flares at the back into a little train. It is all cut on the bias of the goods.

Married, This Girl Still Lives in Old Romance

Cherishes Memories of Her First Love.

BY DORIS BLAKE.

Is it possible to forget the one great love of your life? It may have been a first love, the romance of your 'teens. It may have been something that happened in your early twenties.

Or, it might have been a still more adult capitulation to the love god. In any event, fate decreed that you and the big love of your life did not marry. You wed another man. You have a child, or children, by this man. Seemingly you have everything to make you happy—but that old love stands between you and the present generous offerings of fate.

Some women manage to. Some do not. It's all according to the emotional makeup. The dreamer type succumbs to the weakness of clinging to an old heart fancy. The realist measures her content in terms of what she has.

"Eugenie" loved dearly for five years a man whom fate decreed she should never marry. Three years ago she married a man she admits she is fond of—would probably love but for the constantly recurring memories of the other one. There's a baby in addition to a dearly devoted husband to compensate for the old loss. But "Eugenie" writes: "This other man seems to come before me all the time. Memories come back of past times and I cry. But when I think of my husband's goodness it makes me ashamed."

Well, it's all very human—and weak! Unfair, too, and disloyal! Disloyalty may be quite as much a thing of thought as of deed!

The mind can be trained to act in healthy channels. Mental shutters can be drawn down and old memories kept out. But only by substituting new dreams, new hopes and new energy to make them true.

CASERIO FIGHT WITH BALSAMO A RING NATURAL

Who Could Arrange Better Battle?

BY FRENCH LANE.

A large amount of work and very little play was most evident in the training camps of the New York and Chicago Golden Gloves squads yesterday.

The coaches—heartless they seemed to a lot of the boxers—were putting the final polish on the warriors whose battles will thrill a huge throng at the Chicago Stadium on Wednesday night.

From out of all the toil—the road work, the boxing, the gymnasium drills, and even from the steaming showers—came the gossip that the middleweight struggle between Fred Caserio of the Chicago team and Henry Balsamo of New York, in thrills, hard punches, and clever boxing, will come close to being the peak of anything that has ever happened in amateur boxing.

"Put Up or——"

If Caserio loses it will be another "black night" on La Salle street, for down there, where he works as a clerk in a broker's office, the folks will wager anything from the office door knob to the contents of the safe on him. If you are not a betting man and think Balsamo or any other 160 pound amateur fighter in the world can whip Caserio, don't do any talking about it in La Salle street or in the vicinity of the Board of Trade.

For in that neighborhood they will insist that you say it with something other than words.

Just why the training camp followers should come to the conclusion that this bout is to be a new high spot in Golden Gloves boxing was not explained by any of them. It possibly is due to the fact that Caserio was the captain of the Chicago team which gave New York such an unmerciful trouncing back in 1931.

Wins National Title.

Since those scraps Caserio has been on the upgrade all the time. He deserted Golden Gloves last year to try for a place on the United States Olympic team. He won the National A. A. U. middleweight championship. Then he missed winning a place on the Olympic team by just an inch. He lost the closest decision any fighter ever lost in the Olympic finals.

He was an alternate on the United States team, but didn't get a chance to fight. So it isn't any wonder he entered into this year's Golden Gloves competition in a more furious mood than ever.

At the New York training quarters much pride was being taken in the large number of hard punchers on the team. The most terrific hitter of them all, it was easy to discover, is Balsamo, who is to be Caserio's foe in the intercity battles.

New York Coach Confident.

"What if he doesn't land that punch?" the coach was asked.

"He will win anyway," was the reply. "Caserio will become exhausted running away from him."

The story was carried back to the Chicago camp and Caserio appeared to be the least concerned of all the members of the Chicago squad.

Balsamo is a newcomer to the Golden Gloves ranks. He didn't start boxing until just about a year ago, but during his busy amateur campaign won the Metropolitan 160 pound championship before capturing the New York Golden Gloves title. He's a husky fellow, a bit more so than Caserio.

The ticket sale was going along at a brisk clip yesterday. This morning tickets may be purchased at the Madison street box office of the Stadium as well as THE TRIBUNE Public Service office and at the Tribune Tower.

End Training Today.

The training for the intercity battles will end today. It will be a stiff drill. There will be more roadwork this morning. Three rounds of boxing and perhaps three rounds of floor work will make up the gymnasium activities this afternoon.

Only brisk limbering up exercises will be on the program tomorrow. Then will come the weighing in early on Wednesday afternoon.

Golden Glovers from New York on Air Tonight

Members of the New York Golden Gloves squad, who meet Chicago's championship team at the Stadium Wednesday night, will speak over W-G-N at 6:15 tonight. Paul Gallico, sports editor of the New York Daily News, the newspaper which sponsors the team, will introduce the boxers.

The Chicago team will be on the air at the same time tomorrow night over W-G-N. The Chicago boys will be introduced by Arch Ward, sports editor of THE TRIBUNE.

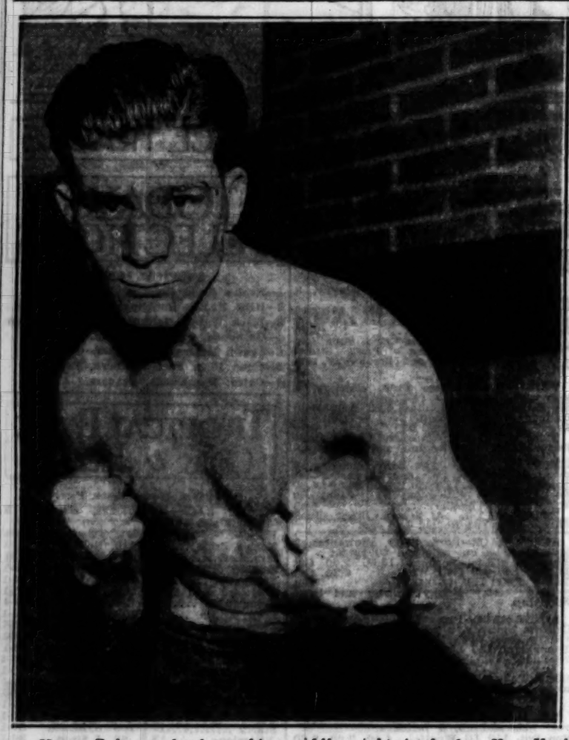
BIG JOB ON HIS HANDS



Henry Balsamo, hard punching middleweight, is the boy New York is backing to beat Freddie Caserio, National A. A. U. 160 pound title-holder and Chicago's Golden Gloves champion at that weight. It's a big task, Harry; you may discover that Wednesday at the Stadium.

Talking it Over

BY ARCH WARD.

IN THE interest of national amity, good will, sportsmanship and personal curiosity I dropped into the gymnasium at Medinah-Michigan Avenue club yesterday to watch the New York Golden Glove boys train for their intercity bouts with Chicago at the Stadium Wednesday night.

Before I could get more than a passing glance at the biceps of the young men pounding one another around the ring one of the New York coaches ordered us out of the room. He said no representatives of the Chicago team had any right to spy on his boys.

A few minutes later a photographer who had been trying since early morning to get a few pictures of the New York squad was told to scat in no uncertain language. We could go on enumerating examples of poor sportsmanship on the part of the invading fighters and officials, but it would avail nothing, for a New Yorker is a New Yorker as we have found from several years' experience in intercity Golden Gloves.

The visiting coaches are experiencing the usual metamorphosis of transplanted New Yorkers. They are striving earnestly to measure up to the artificial grandeur and importance of cosmopolitans visiting in the hinterlands. To them Chicago is a hick town and Chicago's amateur boxers are hick fighters. They have forgotten they never have been able to win a match in a Chicago ring.

I have heard more talk about Bob Pastor, the New York light heavyweight, than I have about Barney Ross. Pastor is the boy the eastern brigade predicts will knock Max Marek of Chicago kicking in the first round. Pastor, according to New York followers, rips and tears, scatters and slays. Marek hasn't a chance, they say.

Maybe so. But after watching Pastor in the finals of the New York tournament and after seeing Marek fight his way through the toughest field that ever sought a Chicago championship, it is our opinion that Pastor will go the way of all grade B beef. Marek has courage, stamina, aggressiveness and a hard right hand smash. That ought to be enough for any battler. Or do you like to see them swing axes?

It is our hope that the New York boys will stop talking long enough to let a few sound wallops speak for themselves Wednesday night. I remember vividly the last time a team from New York appeared in the Stadium ring. New York won the first bout and then came eleven straight Chicago victories. It was brutal.

Another thing. There will be no chance for the New York boys to leave the dressing room with gloves slit to permit bare knuckles to crash against Chicago jaws as they tried to do in New York a year ago. This is Chicago and the members of THE TRIBUNE Officials' association have a way of looking after those details. My 260 pound co-worker, Wilfred Smith, almost handled the situation single handed in New York last year. Another attempt by New York to violate the rules of common decency and I fear the entire press row would be unable to restrain him from tearing our guests limb from limb.

At a baseball or football game I like to see a close score. It adds to the excitement. I don't mind even if an opponent gives Barney Ross a run for his money. But when Chicago's Golden Glove team fights New York Wednesday night I hope Chicago wins all 16 bouts.

As far as I am concerned those 16 New York fighters are public enemies and should be treated accordingly.

TWO FOR CUBS! BUSH, WARNEKE WIN, 5-1 AND 3-1

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[BOX SCORES ON FOLLOWING PAGE.]

Sacramento, Cal., March 26.—The red hot sports of Sacramento, who last week made feverish inquiry to learn whether they might ballyhoo the first line Cub talent, this afternoon watched the National league champions in the lineup which probably will be assembled on opening day, 2½ weeks hence. Moreover, they saw two of the National league's very best pitchers in swell form. Guy Bush went the route to win a three hit encounter, 5 to 1, and Lon Warneke led the Yannigans to a two hit, 3 to 1 triumph in the seven inning second game.

The opening day cast had not previously appeared together in competition this year. Manager Grimm played throughout the first game, the first time he has performed on the defense this year. And Gabby Hartnett did the catching, his first catching since before the team left Los Angeles.

Six Hitless Innings.

Bush, the first pitcher to go nine innings for the Cubs this year, did not allow a hit until two were out in the seventh. To make the enthusiastic Mississippian's day the happier, he accomplished one-fourth of the Cubs' total, knocking out two line singles.

The Cubs could have won the game on homers alone, Cuyler and Hartnett each getting one. Babe Herman, who has been in a slump since he left his dear southern California, failed to get the ball out of the infield, but made a great catch against the right field fence in the sixth to prolong Bush's hitless span.

Warneke didn't allow a hit in the second game until the sixth, when Borja and Kampouris clicked singles which enabled the coast leaguers to avoid a shutout.

Homer Gives Cubs Lead.

Cuyler gave the Cubs a two run lead by driving in Billy Herman ahead of him with a homer in the first inning of the first game. It became apparent from Bush's spry behavior that the pair would just about suffice. The two runs did continue as the Chicago total until the eighth, when Cuyler again functioned, driving in English with the third Cub marker with a single to center.

In the ninth the Cubs added two more runs. With one down, Hartnett got his homer, a great smack over the far distant left center field fence. Jurges was safe on an error, took second on Bush's second single, stole third, and ran home on Bill Herman's fly.

Double Is First Hit.

Kampouris and Lahman had been retired in the seventh inning when French knocked the first hit off Bush, a sizeable double to left center, but he died on second when Jurges threw out Woodall.

Steinbacker singled with one down in the ninth and took second on a wild pitch. Kampouris supplied the next to last putout of the contest with a fly to Cuyler. Then Lahman slapped a double off the right field fence and Steinbacker trotted home with the runs that spoiled a shutout for Bush.

Not a Cub got to first in the second game until Warneke walked with two out in the third. Warneke didn't stay on base long. Hack promptly filed out to end the inning.

Can't Cash In on Error.

Two walks and a two base error by Hack failed to give the Senators a run in the third. Wirts walked, but went down in a double play. Borja walked, and Backer grounded to Hack, who threw high over Hendrick's head, Borja reaching third and Backer second. The threat ended when Koenig threw out Camilli.

Jurges led off the fourth with the first hit of the game, but McCarron, Demaree, and Barton couldn't get the ball out of the infield.

The Cubs broke through with two out in the sixth. After Warneke and Hack had been retired, Jurges walked and McCarron beat out an infield single. Demaree singled through French, Jurges scoring. McCarron took third and Demaree advanced to second on the throw to third. Barton singled to right, scoring McCarron and Demaree.

MISSIONS DEFEAT SOX, 7-6; OAKS TIE THEM, 5 TO 5

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

San Francisco, Cal., March 26.—The White Sox didn't profit much from their strenuous Sabbath labors hereabouts. The Oakland Oaks held them to a 5 to 5 nine inning tie across the bay in the morning game, and then the Missions beat them, 7 to 6, here this afternoon. On top of this was a painfully slim gate at each place, caused by another dose of liquid sunshine, generally known as rain.

To make matters more irritating the afternoon effort saw Ted Lyons do a nose dive. Lyons, partly because of an error by himself, was victimized for four runs in the first inning by the Missions. He bore down and held them hitless for four innings, but stayed just long enough to be hammered for three runs in the sixth, in which Jim Dykes gave aid to the enemy with a wild throw for distance.

Old Timers Too Tough.

Possibly because they were filled up on baseball, for the day, the Sox didn't reach the stage of boisterous batting in the afternoon. They collected eleven hits, but these were hardly enough, considering that rookie minor league talent was opposing them.

The main difficulty in the morning game against the Oaks was odd parts from other day major league machines. The Chicagoans were off to a comfortable lead, but the advantage couldn't be held by Ed Walsh or Clarence [Lefty] Fieber, who were opposed by castoffs Beryl Horne, one time Cub, and Dutch Ruether, once a famous wanderer around the big leagues. They held the Sox to one hit in the last five innings.

Walsh, Fieber Fail.

Fonseca didn't get as much assistance as expected from his pitchers in the 5 to 5 Oakland game. Walsh was supposed to share the entire burden with Fieber. Walsh stayed for four innings, during which the team of which he was a member last season thumped him for six hits and three runs. Fieber, also an ex-Oak, gave up the two tying runs in a three inning workout, and because of the unsatisfactory performance Chad Kimsey was permitted to finish. There was nothing wrong with him.

The Sox batters, who have been playing Ned with most Coast league pitchers, kept up their good work this morning as long as a couple of rookies

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Miami, Fla., March 26.—We have been setting many of our laws at naught for these last several years as the Rev. Bishop Cannon and Mrs. Ella Boole will attest, but your correspondent would be greatly obliged to any one who could and would explain in simple, dumb monosyllables just how it has been possible for this fair and frivolous seaboard to scoff at the law of gravitation in this winter of the great American panic. Perhaps your correspondent had better say he does not wish to hear any explanations, whatever, but merely desires to loll among the sunshine and the hibiscus and the bacardi and wonder vaguely what has been holding this community up this winter.

This Florida coast, by all the rules of economics and trade, ought to be dangling down around its own ankles like a sophomore's socks and moping over the terrible prank of Fate which knocked the bottom out of everything and let it down to some new bottom. And here is this daffy shore going to the horse park and the dog parks and betting $182,000 in cash money in one p. m. on seven races between seven fields of June bugs running around a cameo horse ring ten miles out in the rattlesnake country.

Mr. Bruen Is Boss.

This little horse ring, known as Tropical Park, is conducted by Frank J. Bruen, a race track promoter who was inducted into the horse business by his own pa in St. Louis more than 30 years ago. He was the first successor to Tex Rickard in the Madison Square Garden firm, but was let go by mutual consent because the Garden's directorate wished to hold a board meeting to pass on each of his dealings with the lopeared and child minded managers and prize fighters with whom he had to deal.

They gave Rickard carte blanche and he made money for the stockholders in the long run, but when Tex died and Bruen became his successor the directors, on behalf of the stockholders, reserved the right to convoke something on the order of a special session of congress and chew the towel and offer amendments and substitute bills whenever Mr. Bruen had it in mind to match a couple of totally undistinguished alley rivals for a four round preliminary.

Mr. Rickard had been a dictator with the kind of absolute powers, but Mr. Bruen, as Rickard's successor, had no more sayso than John the Baptist. This is not a blasphemous crack, but an honest allusion to an actual character who used to run the mule power cable elevator in the tower of the old garden and who moved up to the new edifice as one of the atmospheric but not particularly useful traditions. So pretty soon Mr. Bruen, the horse fellow, was no longer one of them and since then Mr. Bruen has been a member of the Florida community.

He Put Over Race Bill.

There was a spell a few years ago in Florida when Mr. Bruen, drawing $400 a week in pay from Joseph E. Widener, the big Philadelphia millionaire, kept his clothes on for 72 hours and, by his own efforts and the expenditure of his own resources, the nature of which I will not go into, compelled the passage of the horse track bill in the Florida legislature over the veto of the then incumbent governor. The governor had promised to sign it beforehand but broke into a moral perspiration under the intimidating glares of the right minded element from the swamps at the last moment and marked it "no."

Anyway, the fact the horse track racing and mutuel betting is now permitted in Florida is due to Mr. Bruen's personal activity. Not long after the law was ratified, however, he and Mr. Widener ceased to be associates and friends and Mr. Bruen went over to the other park. Mr. Bruen's park does not bar certain persons who might be unwelcome on Mr. Widener's premises.

But then Mr. Widener's park not only welcomes but tends to exalt the financier type of horseman and, recalling some recent testimony in the hearings of the senate committees in Washington, I am no longer of a mind to choose sides, morally, between those who go out and take it with a gun, at some risk of their precious health and lives, and those who send out young salesmen, fresh out of college, to take it in the name of investment affiliates.

His Lordship Is O. K.

When Lord Derby was visiting this country a few years ago and Mr. Widener was leading him around and presuming to explain to the American reporters what his lordship meant by what he said, I formed a certain opinion of Americans who fling their arms around English noblemen. I used to encounter his lordship in London now and again when he was secretary of war and never found him in need of interpretation by anybody.

Well, here it is Florida again, in the panic year, with money rolling through the machines like five-star finals through the presses and what I cannot understand about it all, and therefore pass along to the great minds, if any, of this our beloved homeland, as Huey Long would say, is where the money comes from and how it hides out from the groceryman.

DE PAUL TAKES THIRD PLACE IN CATHOLIC MEET

Cathedral Quintet Wins Easily.

BY HOWARD BARRY.

Cathedral High school of Indianapolis won the national Catholic interscholastic basketball title by crushing St. Rita of Chicago, 31 to 10, last night in the final round of the championship tournament at Loyola gymnasium.

De Paul academy took third place by beating Reitz Memorial High school of Evansville, Ind., 25 to 24, after a three minute overtime period in the first game of the evening.

Throughout the early stages of the tournament the stalwart boys from Indianapolis had been playing under wraps, extending themselves just enough to win. Saturday night they turned on the pressure for the first time to overwhelm De Paul in the semifinals and last evening in the finals they cut loose with all they had.

Shipp Leads Attack.

With Charley Shipp catching passes on his fingertips, pivoting away from guards and scoring field goals from every angle, Cathedral rushed into a commanding lead in the first quarter and kept increasing it till the final gun. At one time it scored 17 consecutive points, while holding their opponents scoreless. Twenty-two minutes of play had elapsed before St. Rita was able to make a field goal.

Charley Shipp, the fast and husky center, scored 15 of his team's points, making five field goals and five free throws, while Eddie O'Connor had three baskets and a free throw. However, it was the flawless way in which the team functioned as a unit that enabled Cathedral to outclass its opponent so completely. The score at the quarter was 12 to 1, at the half, 18 to 2, and at the third quarter, 23 to 10.

St. Rita took the lead on a free throw by Jackowski shortly after the opening tipoff, but relinquished it immediately as Theobald dribbled in for a field goal. Two free throws by Shipp and two field goals by Edward O'Connor gave Cathedral an 8 to 1 advantage. Then Shipp broke away for two baskets in quick succession to make the score 12 to 1 at the end of the quarter.

Through the second quarter the rout continued. Two more free throws by Shipp and a basket apiece for John O'Connor and Barnhorst made it 18 to 1. Then Deutsch of St. Rita scored from the free throw line to break Cathedral's string of 17 consecutive points. The half ended 18 to 2 without a field goal for St. Rita.

St. Rita Gets One.

As the second half began, Cullen scored a free throw for St. Rita. Then Shipp took a pass under the basket, pivoted away from a guard and scored. St. Rita finally got its first field goal in the 22d minute, when Cullen shot from the side. But Shipp came right back to tip one in from a rebound. Free throws by Shipp and Nash brought the third quarter to and end, 23 to 6.

Early in the last period, Deutsch caged a shot from the sidelines to bring St. Rita up to eight points. Broderick made a free throw. Then Shipp caught a fast pass on his fingertips and slipped the ball to Broderick as the latter came in to score two more points for Cathedral. Eddie O'Connor made a free throw and a field goal, after which Shipp took the ball on a rebound and scored again, making it 31 to 8. Free throws by McCue and Nash for St. Rita, brought the final score to 31 to 10.

Reitz Comes from Behind.

The Reitz team brought the spectators to their feet by its courageous uphill fight after it appeared to be badly outclassed in the early stages. After trailing, 10 to 3, at the quarter and 14 to 8 at the half, the Indiana boys came with a rush to tie the score, 22 to 22, in the closing minute of regular playing time. Tonelli's free throw and Yost's field goal provided the deciding points in the extra period, during which Ellspermann and McGannon, caged free throws for Reitz.

The battle for third place started off as if it were destined to become a rout. A minute after the opening tipoff De Paul had a 5 point lead. After being temporarily checked, the Chicago boys broke loose again to take a 10 to 3 advantage at the quarter and a 14 to 6 lead at the half. The situation seemed well in hand as the teams swung into the last quarter, with De Paul holding a 19 to 14 advantage.

Then Reitz came with a rush. A basket and a free throw while De Paul was scoring a free throw brought the score to 20 to 17. Then Will took a pass from Davis, dribbled up to the basket and hoisted the ball into the loop, making it 20 to 19. Tonelli of De Paul took a rebound and scored. A free throw by Ellsperman for Reitz brought the score to 22 to 20. A minute before the gun Will scored the tying basket.

ST. LOUIS ELEVEN WINS WESTERN SOCCER TITLE, 1-0

Defeats Sparta for Second Straight Victory.

BY OFFSIDE.

The Stix soccer team of St. Louis, Mo., won the western championship by defeating Sparta, Chicago champion, 1 to 0, on the muddy Sparta stadium field in the second game of the title series yesterday. A goal by Roe, playing inside left, early in the game gave Stix victory. Stix now will meet the winner of the eastern title for the United States championship.

Roe's goal was scored ten minutes after play opened. He received a well placed shot from Gonsalves, Stix inside right, and booted the ball past Baer, Sparta goal tender. Despite the condition of the field, play was fast and Stix threatened to score several times during the remainder of the first half.

Sparta Misses Chance.

Sparta had one scoring opportunity in the second half when Vleck had the ball in position, but Nolan, Stix left half back, kicked out of danger. With Gonsalves leading the attack, Stix threatened in the last 15 minutes of play, but Baer kept his goal inviolate.

Sparta tried desperately to score in the waning minutes of the contest. Turek went in for Mrnka, who made his first appearance in the title series, and Stevenson replaced Vondrasek.

Second in Row.

It was Stix's second consecutive victory over the Chicago champions. Last Sunday in the first game, Stix scored a 7 to 3 triumph, a record score for the western finals.

The Swedish-Americans defeated the Bohemian All-Stars, 2 to 0, in a preliminary game. The Sparta-Stix lineup:

RANGERS WHIP CANADIENS IN HOCKEY PLAYOFF

New York, March 26.—(AP)—The New York Rangers defeated the Montreal Canadiens tonight, 5 to 2, in the first game of the Stanley cup preliminary playoff between the teams which finished third in the National Hockey league's two divisions. The second contest of the total goal home and home series will be played at Montreal Tuesday.

The Rangers got the jump in the first three minutes, aided by a penalty to Howie Morenz, Canadien center. Bill and Bun Cook each banged in a goal during his absence, and the Rangers kept on piling up the score until Montreal put on a final flurry in the last minute and a quarter of play.

The game was a rough, tough affair, in which 13 penalties were handed out. The Canadiens lacked some of their usual speed, passed badly, and shot wildly. Andy Aitkenhead, Ranger goalie, had to make only 19 stops, as the New Yorkers showed a fine defense.

South Section Teams Lose in K. of C. Games

Damen and Setters of the west division, St. Cyr of the north, and Quigley of the south end remained in the running for the Knights of Columbus Basketball league championship as a result of victories yesterday in the quarter-final games at the 132d Regiment armory.

Damen and Setters entered the semi-finals by eliminating two south division teams in the best games of the afternoon. Damen defeated Perez, 23 to 21, in a five minute overtime contest. Setters nosed out Loyola-Hyde Park, south division champion, 16 to 15.

St. Cyr, led by Bob Gruenig with 15 points, piled up a 33 to 8 score on Santa Maria of the south end division. Gruenig made five baskets at the start of the first half.

Quigley, south end champion, was given a hard fight by Garcia Mareno of Harvey, but won out, 22 to 14, mainly through the shooting of Yanzinitis, who registered six baskets and a free throw. Quigley led, 10 to 3, at the half.

The semi-finals will be played Thursday night at the 132d Regiment armory in both the championship and the consolation bracket. The schedule will be Loyola-Hyde Park vs. Perez, Setters vs. Damen, St. Cyr vs. Quigley, and Santa Maria vs. Garcia Mareno.

Y. M. C. A. POCKET BILLIARD FINALS START TONIGHT

The four sectional finals of the Chicago Y. M. C. A. pocket billiard tournament will start tonight. The four winners will compete at a later date for the Chicago Y. M. C. A. championship. Fourteen associations entered a total of 575 boys from 12 to 15 years old for the age and club titles which terminated on Saturday.

The northern district finals will be decided tonight at the Wilson Avenue "Y," 1725 Wilson avenue. The central district will be held at the Wabash avenue Y. M. C. A., 3763 South Wabash avenue.

Sox Lose to Missions, 7-6; Tie Oaks, 5-5

Pete Scott, once a Cub, had his bat swinging almost as soon as the show started. He singled after Mailho had doubled off Walsh in the first inning and a run resulted. In the second the Sox leaped into the lead. Appling singled, Dykes walked, Berry singled to score Appling, and Walsh doubled to send two more home.

A single and a two bagger frisked Walsh for another run in the second, but his mates gave him two more. Singles by Appling and Dykes and a walk to Berry filled the bases. When Welsh walked Appling was forced in. Dykes scored when Hayes sailed a fly to deep center.

The run yielded by Walsh in the fourth resulted from a walk prior to a pair of singles. That reduced the Sox lead to 5 to 3. Half this advantage melted away in the fifth, when Scott singled off Fieber and scored on a triple by Kelly. Then in the seventh Mailho walked, stole second, and scored the tying run on Scott's third single.

Sox Start Well.

The Sox opened the Mission game with three hits and a run. Hayes doubled, stopped at third on Rhyne's single, and scored on Simmons' single to right.

Lyons' disappointing first inning also started with a double. Almada got it. Sever singled to center. Eckhardt laid down a sacrifice bunt, but Lyons fumbled it, filling the bags with none out. Dahlgren hit into a double play on which Almada scored. Blakely doubled against the fence, scoring Sever. Then Walters hit a home run over the left field fence.

Three more Sox hits produced a run in the fourth inning. Swanson doubled and scored on Dykes' single. Grube also singled and Dykes went to third, but Lyons grounded out to retire the side.

Sixth Is Bad News.

The frisking of Lyons for three runs in the sixth started with Dahlgren scratching a hit to Dykes. Blakely sacrificed. Walters singled past Lyons, Dahlgren scoring. Coscarart singled and Swanson returned the ball to third base. Dykes pegged to second to get Coscarart, but the throw sailed into right field. Before it could be retrieved, Walters and Coscarart had scored.

Rhyne's double, Funk's single, another single by Kress, a wild throw by Sever, a single by Swanson, and another error produced four runs for the Sox in the eighth before Grube hit into a double play.

The first bad news of the training trip was issued by Manager Fonseca today. He shipped Pitcher Fabian Kowalik back to San Antonio, whence the lad was obtained last fall. Carl Boone, a right handed pitcher, who had been signed as a free agent, was given his unconditional release.

Lewis Clashes with Pinetzki on Mat Tonight

Ed [Strangler] Lewis and Leon Pinetzki, heavyweight champion of Poland, will be the featured performers at Doc Krone's heavyweight wrestling show at the Coliseum tonight. There will be five supporting matches.

Lewis, who won the world's championship three times, is now on a comeback tour. He wrestled six times during the last eight days. His headlock, the deadliest of all holds, will be in perfect working order. However, Lewis' greatest task tonight is to reach Pinetzki's head.

Pinetzki towers five inches over Lewis and holds a 28 pound advantage, although the Strangler now scales 240. Leon at one time weighed 282 but reduced since coming to America.

The match will be one fall to a finish with an hour and a half time limit.

Karol Zbyszko, Chicago Pole, will face Gus Sonnenberg, originator of the flying tackle, in the semiwindup. In the other bouts, Jack Smith of Chicago will meet Jack Kogut, northwest side German, who is making his local debut; Jack Washburn of Boston will oppose Glenn Munn of Nebraska; Sammy Stein of New York will face Mike Romano, Italian veteran, and Rudy Hoffman will clash with Ivan Leskinovich.

SWIM VICTORY IS SURPRISE TO PURPLE COACH

The veteran Purple coach so little expected his team to win the title that he did not accompany them east, but elected to stay home to save expenses. The team had finished a poor second to Michigan in the Big Ten championships a week ago.

In fact, the Northwestern athletic authorities at first were reluctant to send the team to the nationals this year, due to scarcity of funds. However, the team traveled to all of its out of town meets by automobile, thus saving sufficient car fare for the trip east.

McLaughlin Rolls 693 to Win Postoffice Singles

Frank P. McLaughlin rolled 693 yesterday to capture high singles honors in the Greater Chicago Post Office Bowling league matches at Mussey's recreation. Doubles winners were J. E. Coakley and B. H. Buhlman with 1,327 total. E. Williams of the Cragin station bowled the high individual game with 282 pins.

Ross Agrees to Return Bout with Petrolle at 138

Barney Ross has accepted an offer to meet Billy Petrolle in a return bout at New York in May. Jack Dempsey is promoting the show.

Ross accepted the contest with the stipulation that Petrolle weigh 138 pounds, the same poundage he made when defeated by Ross at the Stadium last Wednesday. Before leaving for his home in Duluth, Minn., Saturday night, Jack Hurley, manager of Petrolle, said Billy will not make less than 142 pounds in the future.

An amateur show will be offered tonight at the Marigold Gardens.

Young Scotty will meet Mickey O'Shea in the five round windup of a seven bout boxing and wrestling card to be offered by Matchmaker Johnny Coulon tomorrow night at the Midway arena, 6116 Cottage Grove avenue. The boxers will fight at 152 pounds. Arrangements for one of the supporting bouts had not been completed yesterday. The remainder of the card:

George Jonasen vs. Eddie Jacobs [wrestling].

Pair Fail to Open Their Parachutes.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 26.—(AP)—Slade Hulbert, veteran acrobatic flyer, and Andrew C. Carr, service station operator and sportsman pilot, were killed near the municipal airport today when they leaped from a spinning biplane and plunged to their deaths without opening their parachutes.

Airport officials were at a loss to explain the cause of the accident, other than venturing the opinion that Hulbert had been giving Carr instruction in spinning the small sport aircraft.

Eyewitnesses said Hulbert left the ship at an altitude of about 1,000 feet. The craft seemed to straighten out for an instant, they said, and then fell into another spin. They said they saw Carr jump when the plane was about 200 feet from the ground.

Hulbert on Feb. 25, 1931, completed an inverted outside loop, record acclaiming him as the first commercial pilot to accomplish the dangerous maneuver.

Storm Blamed for Crash.

Oakland, Cal., March 26.—(AP)—Rainstorms, causing poor visibility, were blamed today by Varney Speed Lines officials for the crash of their transport which took thirteen lives, injured one person, and reduced two dwellings to smoking ruins.

The plane, piloted by Noel Evans, former war flier, and carrying as passengers Herman L. Brown, Hollywood builder, and Miss Lavele Miller of Los Angeles, hurtled out of a rainstorm near here last night, carried away the tops of two houses, and crashed into the dwelling of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Arisa, with an explosion that was heard for miles.

Nine Trapped in Flames.

The Arisa home and an adjoining dwelling, sprayed with burning gasoline, roared into flames, trapping Mrs. Arisa, her four children, and four friends, all of whom died swiftly. Joseph Arisa, the father, leaped through a window so critically burned he died today.

Victims, besides occupants of the plane, were Mrs. Arisa, her children, Anna, 10; Joseph Jr., 6; Michael, 4; and Juanita, 1 year 6 months, and four neighbors, Tony Serrano, 20; Joseph Serrano, 18, his brother; George Jeannott, 18; and Flores Fuentes, 17.

Statement by Air Line.

"The cause of the accident was due to an unusual and unforeseen condition of the weather that developed its intensity in the immediate locality of the accident, weather reports having been favorable over the entire route.

"The fire started after the plane struck the building. The line has been in operation nearly two years, during which time approximately 2,000,000 miles have been flown and approximately 30,000 passengers carried without injury."

Rose pointed out that while this was one of the major aviation accidents on the coast, its severity was due to the loss of life of those on the ground.

"FLYING WING" AIR TRANSPORT DUE HERE SOON

The first of a fleet of sixty high speed transport planes to be placed in service on United Air Lines this year has been delivered for service tests and will arrive in Chicago on its first coast to coast trip in about two weeks, P. G. Johnson, president of the air line, announced yesterday.

The new plane is a twin motor Boeing powered by two supercharged Wasp motors of 550 horsepower each, a total of 1,100 horsepower. The low wing all metal plane carries ten passengers, two pilots, a stewardess, and mail and express cargoes at a top speed of 183 miles an hour and a cruising speed of 165 miles an hour. It has a cruising range of 660 miles without refueling, Mr. Johnson said.

The new planes will reduce the flying time on the air line, Mr. Johnson declared, making possible new schedules of 13 hours from San Francisco to Chicago, 4½ hours from Chicago to New York City, 2 hours from Chicago to Cleveland, 3 hours from Chicago to Kansas City, and 7 hours from Chicago to Dallas, Tex.

The new Boeing transport plane is virtually a flying wing, streamlined to offer the least air resistance. Its development marks the opening of a new era in high speed air transportation, it was said. It will be the first of a number of types of new, fast passenger planes to be placed in service.

Mr. Johnson said the official performance tests of the new plane showed the following results with full load: Landing speed, 58 miles an hour; takeoff run, 770 feet; rate of climb, 830 feet a minute; climb in ten minutes, 8,000 feet; service ceiling, 18,400 feet; absolute ceiling, 20,500 feet. The plane's wheels are made retractable by electric power, and the cabin is designed for the comfort of the passengers, with large chairs spaced three and one-half feet apart.

Twenty-one of the new Boeings will be in service on the air line within six weeks, Mr. Johnson said, and the remaining thirty-nine will go into service before the end of the year.

John J. McGarigle, Retired Police Veteran, Dies at 74

John J. McGarigle, 74 years old, former south parks policeman and father of Deputy Coroner Chris J. McGarigle, died yesterday at his home in Techny following a paralytic stroke. Mr. McGarigle was pensioned in 1919 after 35 years service on the park police force, and for the succeeding ten years was a guard at the Continental Illinois bank. Funeral services will be held at 9:30 a. m. Wednesday in St. Therese's Roman Catholic church, 80th and Wood streets. Burial will be in Calvary cemetery.

GIRL SERIOUSLY HURT WHEN FIRE TRUCK HITS AUTO

Woman Is Held After Car Kills Man.

Miss Dalina Steib, 17 years old, of Hazelcrest, was seriously injured yesterday when a speeding fire truck struck the automobile in which she was a passenger on Western avenue, in the heart of the Blue Island business district. The automobile was thrown on to the sidewalk. Silas D. Williams, also of Hazelcrest, the driver, escaped injury.

Charles F. Johnson, 65 years old, 4202 North Drake avenue, was killed yesterday at Berteau and Elston avenues by an automobile driven by Mrs. Leona Porm, 26 years old, 3422 Waveland avenue. Mrs. Porm was driving her son, Harry, 5 years old, home from Sunday school.

Woman Driver Freed on Bond.

Johnson remained unidentified until last night when his cousin, Edward Johnson, 3859 Berteau avenue, saw his body at the Martha Washington hospital. Mrs. Porm was released on bond and will appear in the Felony court Tuesday on a charge of manslaughter.

This death and two others yesterday increased the 1933 traffic toll in Cook county to 190. The other victims:

Wasyl Krawcyszyn, 48 years old, 1925 West 61st street. Died in county hospital. He was struck by an automobile in front of 1901 West 51st street earlier in the day. The driver was Steve Kapek, 18 years old, 4832 South Wood street.

Benjamin Tatman, 60 years old, 2706 Potomac avenue, colored. Died in the county hospital. He was hit by an automobile at North Western avenue and Hirsch street on March 2.

An inquest is to be held today into the death of Miss Dorothy Hall, 5510 Sheridan road, a social service worker, who was killed Saturday when an automobile crashed into a post on the Lincoln park outer drive. The driver, Ben Austrian, 3225 Crystal street, told police he lost control of the car when a cigaret which he tried to toss out a window dropped back into Miss Hall's lap and he grabbed for it to keep it from burning her clothing.

Confessions Clear Autoist.

Joseph Kent, 17 years old, 2220 West Railroad avenue, Evanston, and Alfred Perry, 17, of 907 Grove street, Evanston, both Negroes, made a confession following their arrest yesterday in the suburb which cleared George S. Johnson, 2125 Forestview road, Evanston, of a charge of leaving the scene of an accident.

Johnson's car was abandoned in Niles Center after it had sideswiped two other automobiles. He was arrested when he reported it stolen. The Negro boys admitted that they had stolen it and struck the other cars.

PLEASANT RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Shoulders droop under weight of years. Young, yet beauty has fled. Cheeks are sallow and drawn. Unsightly pimples. Keep your system clean and you keep the beauty of youth. Its energy. Its irresistible charm. Then life is not a failure.

Clogged bowels and inactive liver cause poisons to seep through the system. Health vanished and with it beauty and energy. Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets will help save you from this dark hour. For 20 years they have been prescribed in place of calomel to men and women seeking health and freedom from constipation. They act easily and smoothly. No dangerous griping. Take nightly before retiring. Results will amaze you.

Thousands of men and women would never be without Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets, a vegetable compound. Know them by their olive color. 15c, 30c and 60c. All druggists.

GRAIN MARKET MOVES UPWARD ON BUYING WAVE

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

In increasing disposition to buy grains, with expectations of an irregular advancing market, dominated the grain trade in the closing days of last week. On Saturday a wave of greater buying power came into the market, especially in wheat, and operators, who have been timid about taking the buying side, showed their faith in higher prices for the future by making liberal purchases for July and September delivery.

It was argued that the financial situation had improved and that inflation would become more general, with resultant higher prices for all commodities. Pressure from profit takers, a disturbing factor each day at the close, was less apparent.

Buying was decidedly more pronounced, as indicated by the readiness with which the trade absorbed liberal selling of May wheat by the Grain Stabilization corporation, which is said to be liquidating more freely. The Farmers' National was credited with being a good buyer of more deferred futures.

Expect Sane Farm Relief.

Leaders in the grain trade, it is said, have faith in the ability of the senate to formulate and pass a constructive farm relief measure which would benefit farmers without disturbing other conditions. The land leasing proposition, it is believed, will be more sane than any that has been presented and will eventually result in benefiting farmers, and the grain trade as well, by reducing production and surpluses and ultimately bringing higher prices.

A striking feature, that brought a return of confidence among the grain trade, was an awakening to the fact that cash grain prices in all markets have slowly advanced lately without materially increasing offerings from the country, or disturbing the industrial demand. This not only caused short covering, but also brought general commission house buying. With best premiums of the season paid for all the better grades of grain, trade leaders express the belief that the markets have turned upward and that the buying side will be more popular from now on.

Millers Buy Cash Wheat.

Millers bought about 1,000,000 bushels of cash wheat in Chicago during the week, the largest business in a long time, and they bought in their hedges in May and July, and placed them in September.

The advent of the crop scare season is at hand. Parts of Kansas, Oklahoma and Nebraska had a fair amount of snow and rain during the week, and more is needed. In many sections of western Kansas, however, it is believed the moisture has come too late.

Foreign conditions, both crop and speculative, are considered better. While a number of the commission houses are outspokenly bullish on wheat, there are some who advise caution in buying, basing their opinions mainly on the foreign situation. At the close, prices were around the highest of the week, with May closing at 53⅞ to 54 cents, and July practically the same as the May, and with September at 53⅝ to 53¼ cents. May closed ⅝ cent net higher, July was off ¼ cent, and September was ⅝ cent lower than a week ago. Prices for the week follow:

May Corn Gains Friends.

There is said to be a strong local interest long of May corn. Local trade sentiment is mixed. The market runs into selling on all bulges and th corn disappears on breaks. White corn brings high prices at all leading markets. The movement of corn at primary markets since Nov. 1, 1932, aggregates 57,796,000 bushels, compared with 56,934,000 bushels for the same time last year.

At the close, May corn was the highest on the present upturn at 29⅛ cents, or 1 cent above the high point on Monday, with a net gain of 2⅝ cents for the week. July was 31 to 30⅞ cents, up 1½ cents, and September was 32⅝ cents, up 1¾ cents. Prices for the week follow:

Country Sells Cash Oats.

Country holders of cash oats are marketing them and buying in their hedges, there being no profit in holding the cash grain at the present price for May. A better tone prevails and net gains of ⅞ to 1 cent were made for the week, with May finishing at 19⅝ cents, July 19 cents, and September 19⅛ cents.

Holders of barley in the northwest are said to be offering the cash grain more freely, but traders are not disposed to load up. Futures closed unchanged to ⅝ cent higher, with May at 31⅝ cents and July at 33¾ cents.

Lard futures, which sold the highest at the opening of the week, closed with net losses of 15 cents on the basis of $4.47½ for May. Bellies made a net decline of 32½ cents, with buyers less disposed to take hold.

Rail Leaders Here Favor Merger Plan

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

President Roosevelt's proposals for regional consolidation of the railroads and coördination of railroad effort to restore financial stability to this form of transportation were commended in Chicago railroad circles yesterday.

Rail executives declined to be quoted on the Roosevelt program, saying they were leaving public utterances to their committee of three named to confer with the President. However, they did comment on the situation unofficially. Members of the committee are: Carl Gray, president Union Pacific; F. E. Williamson, president New York Central, and J. J. Pelley, president of the New Haven.

One of the chief difficulties in the way of consolidation, according to Chicago railroad men, is to find a means of providing for their workers who would be thrown out of jobs by such action.

Era of Competition Over.

"We feel that the era of competition has gone by," one official remarked. "There ought to be consolidation of the railroads by regions. Accomplishment of this would eliminate waste and should improve service. The roads should save money and consolidation would be helpful to the country in various ways."

It was pointed out that the interstate commerce commission is unable to aid in the merger plan because, under the law, the commission must retain existing lines as a means of maintaining competition. A plan to consolidate the Great Northern and Northern Pacific was rejected on the ground that this would violate the law. The North Western and Milwaukee roads were pointed out as two railways which parallel each other in many places. The consolidation plan would result in large savings in the operation of these roads, it was stated.

The case of de luxe train service between Chicago and the Twin Cities was mentioned. There are six such passenger trains operating between these points, with only enough business for two trains. Other instances of duplication of expensive service include the Chicago-St. Louis, Chicago-Detroit, and Chicago-Omaha runs.

Throw Many Out of Work.

"Elimination of trains, however necessary, would mean elimination of train crews," an executive stated. "Under present conditions it would be a cruel thing to throw any more out of work. Consolidation would mean about 80 per cent less employment on many railroads. Possibly consolidation could be reached gradually, with provision made to provide for the men as they are let out.

"Labor is the big item of overhead for the railroads. Management takes only 3 per cent of the cost. The best that could be done would be to reduce management costs one-third and you would have a saving of only 1 per cent.

"Most of the men belonging to the unions have given their entire lives to railroading. As it is, so many men have been laid off that on some roads only conductors and engineers are left under the seniority rule."

It was pointed out, however, that there are other improvements that could be made under a merger plan. One would be to let the Railway Express agency, whose motor trucks are now running light, handle less than carload freight. If each road were allowed to operate trucks it would result in the highways being cluttered up with half empty competitive motor trucks, whereas if all the roads turned their less than carload freight business over to the express agency this service could be handled in an economical way.

Another place where it was pointed out a saving could be made is in the publication of tariffs. These should be greatly simplified, it was recommended, with fewer classes. An official stated that the roads should also be permitted to put freight rates into effect which would enable them to compete with the Panama canal.

Unions Oppose Plan.

Cleveland, O., March 26.—[Special.]—The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen consider President Roosevelt's reported plan to consolidate railroads "a very improper move."

If the President is to appoint a director or adviser, they consider his reported choice of Carl Gray "a very fine one."

With the President, they favor repeal of the recapture clause.

These were the reactions expressed last night by Alex. F. Whitney, president of the brotherhood, when told what the President was reported to be preparing to do.

"General consolidation of the roads of the country is, in our opinion, a very improper move," Whitney said. "You have mentioned possible savings, but to do it would destroy probably several times that amount in property values in communities which would be deprived of service. Shops and terminals would be abandoned, it would throw some 300,000 men out of jobs, would reduce purchasing power, and would merely add to a very bad situation."

Whitney said it would not be fair to try to lift one business by its bootstraps at the expense of other people.

HARRIMAN BANK DELAY DEFENDED BY U. S. OFFICIAL

Washington, D. C., March 26.—(AP)—F. G. Awalt, acting comptroller of the currency, tonight issued a statement defending the action of L. K. Roberts, chief national bank examiner in New York, for withholding "temporarily" the original of a report showing "irregularities" in the affairs of the Harriman National Bank and Trust company in New York.

Awalt asserted that the delay, resulting in retarded action to prosecute J. W. Harriman, former president of the bank, was "obviously in the public interest and for the protection of the creditors of the bank."

Roberts was reported by Awalt to have submitted last July carbon copies of a report from a bank examiner showing the Harriman bank "irregularities" but to have stated at that time that the original was being withheld "in order to adjust any and all of the problems with which the bank was confronted."

RELIEF PLANS IMPEL WALL ST. TO ACT WARILY

Washington Events Dominate Marts.

BY FRED HARVEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 26.—Washington developments continue to dominate the stock market almost to the exclusion of every other factor.

Much of the high optimism engendered by the new administration's straightforward measures for dealing with the banking crisis, the sweeping economy program rushed through congress, and the "prosperity reviving" beer legislation has disappeared during the last week or so in a cloud of uncertainty and distrust over the newly advanced farm relief and unemployment programs.

Many are beginning to believe that the good indubitably accomplished by the first half of the program may be to a very large extent nullified by the possibilities of the second—that the expenditures on the idle and in behalf of the farmers may offset the savings on government, veterans' compensation and the like.

Market Drifts Lower.

Hence the slow dispiriting drift of the market to lower and still lower levels. A study of the averages shows that approximately 60 per cent of the sensational gains run up in the rampant trading of the first two sessions after the banking holiday have been wiped out by the selling of the last ten days. The utility stocks as a group, in fact, have given up all their newly won ground and the close of trading yesterday found them back below their levels of March 3, the last day of business before the big shutdown. The rails have made the best group net "relief" at Washington. They are only a little more than a point below the highs they achieved on March 16—the second day of the reopened market and the high point of the resumed movement.

Averages by Groups.

The range of the different groups is shown by the following tabulation depicting the averages by groups, railroads, industrials and the composite on fifty representative issues at the close of business yesterday as compared with the March 16 highs and the levels of March 3:

	Mar. 3.	Mar. 16 highs.	Yesterday's close.
25 railroads	19.60	24.14	22.27
25 industrials	81.21	95.72	85.87
50 stocks	50.50	59.93	54.07

	Mar. 3.	Mar. 16.	Yesterday's close.
Allied Chemical	77½	88⅝	78¼
American Can	54⅜	62⅜	59½
American Telephone	89¼	106⅝	93⅝
J. I. Case	36⅝	52¼	45⅞
Consolidated Gas	46⅜	52½	44
General Motors	10⅜	14½	12
New York Central	15⅝	21	20
Public Service, N. J.	40¼	48	37½
Sears Roebuck	14⅝	22¼	17⅛
Union Pacific	69¼	80⅝	72½
United States Steel	26¼	33⅝	28⅝

Weakness in Utilities.

The acute weakness of the utilities group is, of course, due to a widespread conviction that this industry is in for some uncomfortable experience in the form of downward rate revision and regulation. American Telephone, generally believed to be slated for a dividend cut in addition to the common woes, has been a conspicuous selling target all week and has been driven to one new low for the year after another.

Except for a scattering of professed dichards, the street is pretty generally agreed to belief that the spring business revival so devoutly hoped for has finally gone astray—got lost in the woods or something.

HALL PRINTING REPORTS PROFIT OF $330,957 IN '32

The W. F. Hall Printing company yesterday reported a net income of $330,957 for the fiscal year ending Jan. 31, 1933, after all charges including depreciation of $834,565, compared with $1,058,309 last year. The per share earning for the 1932 period was 75 cents, compared with $2.52 in the preceding year.

The consolidated balance sheet as of Jan. 31, 1933, shows current assets of $2,797,853, including $777,276 cash. Current liabilities were $789,765. The company has no bank loans and its funded debt was reduced by $615,000, including the sinking fund payment which was due on March 15, 1933.

"The economic distress which prevailed during the last year," Frank R. Warren, president, stated in his letter to stockholders, "caused material reductions in magazine and catalogue circulations and in their advertising content, which in turn seriously affected the gross volume of the business of our company. The management met this by instituting substantial economics through modern control methods."

Mr. Warren stated that there can be no improvement in general business without its being felt in the printing industry.

TWO CLEVELAND BANKS PRESENT NEW PROPOSALS

Cleveland, O., March 26.—[Special.]—Officials of the Guardian Trust company and the Union Trust company, the two large banks still operating with restricted withdrawals, presented plans for creating new national banks to John K. McKee, chief of the examining division of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, in a day long series of meetings here today at the federal reserve bank.

Officials of the banks said tonight that McKee had promised them prompt action on their requests for R. F. C. help and told them to prepare to go to Washington in a few days for a final hearing.

Ohio Commerce Director Theodore H. Tangeman and Sidney B. Congdon, Cleveland R. F. C. manager, were present at all conferences, which began early this morning and ended tonight with McKee's return to Detroit.

About 800 depositors of the two banks formed a temporary depositors' protective association at a meeting at the Hotel Carter here this afternoon. After the meeting telegrams were sent to Secretary of the Treasury Woodin and Ohio Bank Superintendent Fulton asking that the association be heard by state and federal officials before any reorganization plans are approved.

MORE BUYERS ATTEND AM. FURNITURE MART; HIGHER PRICES SEEN

Resumption of buying on a larger scale by retail furniture stores was reflected last week by increased attendance of buyers in the Chicago market, according to registrations at the American Furniture Mart.

"Attendance, which fell off as a result of the banking moratorium, is already back to normal levels," Lawrence H. Whiting, president of the mart, announced. "On Friday alone, approximately 200 buyers visited the exhibit spaces, coming from the larger stores in Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Kentucky, Missouri, Nebraska, Ohio, and Wisconsin, as well as from Chicago and other Illinois cities. Even such distant points as Washington, D. C., Texas, and Canada were represented."

A widespread belief that furniture prices are going up, coupled with the fact that practically all home furnishing stores have been operating on a minimum inventory, was credited with bringing buyers back into the market at once. The next regular national market period does not open until June.

The attendance figures, the Mart announced, are exclusive of traffic in the new National Restaurant Mart, now housed in the same building.

CONNECTICUT EASES BAN ON INSURANCE LOANS

Hartford, Conn., March 26.—(AP)—Emergency orders issued during the banking holiday prohibiting Connecticut life insurance companies from granting policy loans and paying cash surrender values were modified tonight by Howard P. Dunham, state insurance commissioner, to permit payments where necessary to meet pay rolls and on applications made prior to March 10.

Payments on applications made before March 10 will be allowed "after an investigation that the application was made in good faith for engagements made by the policy holder prior thereto."

Under the emergency orders issued March 9 companies were permitted to make payments only in cases of extreme need. The amounts, however, were limited to $100. Under the modified order loans of cash values may be allowed "up to the amount necessary not to exceed the value provided for in the policy."

UNION CARBIDE EARNS 97 CENTS A SHARE IN '32

The pamphlet report of the Union Carbide and Carbon corporation, mailed yesterday to stockholders, shows $8,781,000 net income for 1932, equivalent to 97 cents a share on the outstanding capital stock. In 1931, the corporation earned $18,030,000 or $2 a share.

The company closed the year with current assets of $61,765,000 and working capital of $55,168,000. The ratio of current assets to current liabilities was 15 to 1 after payment of the Jan. 2 dividends.

Jesse J. Ricks, president, said in the report that the corporation continued to follow a definite program of research and development work.

"The demand for the corporation's products was substantially reduced," he said. "This decrease was somewhat tempered by the introduction of new products and new uses for existing ones.

"Although there were substantial increases in the volume and value of sales in some products, the aggregate sales declined. The trend was downward from the beginning of the year through July, after which there was steady improvement until December."

Stockholders increased from 49,369 to 53,439, a gain of 8 per cent. The company last year operated 160 plants in the United States and foreign countries.

FEBRUARY SALES OF AUTOS DROP; UNDER YEAR AGO

Distribution of automobiles in the seventh federal reserve district decreased in February, as against January, contrary to seasonal trend, and totaled considerably under the corresponding month of 1932, according to the monthly business conditions report of the Chicago Federal Reserve bank.

Sales of representative distributors reporting to the bank aggregated 25.4 per cent less in the monthly comparison and 49.5 per cent of those for February, 1932. Although the volume of cars sold by retail dealers totaled 12.9 per cent below January and 38 per cent below last year, a number of dealers sold more cars than either a month or a year previous.

Similarly, used car sales declined in both the monthly and yearly comparisons, but almost half the dealers had heavier sales in the former comparison and about one-third in the latter.

February orders booked by furniture manufacturers reporting to the bank registered in the aggregate but little change from the preceding month and totaled 19 per cent below the volume of a year ago.

Row Splits Preliminary Oil Meeting

Washington, D. C., March 26.—(AP)—Gathering privately a day in advance of an oil regulation conference called by the administration for tomorrow, representatives of independent petroleum producers reported tonight they had howled down a proposal by the American Petroleum institute to agree to a program of federal curtailment of production below the level of present requirements.

Those present behind the closed doors reported that approximately 200 men took part in a stormy all day session that became so heated at one point that a delegation from California walked out of the meeting.

The conference for tomorrow was called by the White House through Secretary Ickes. At it the administration declared it hoped for an ironclad agreement among the oil producing states to curtail sharply a daily overflow of some 200,000 barrels.

Sought an Agreement.

The unscheduled meeting of today, it was said by those taking part, represented an effort by the American Petroleum institute to gain an agreement that could be placed before tomorrow's conference, pledging the producers and representatives of governors to a set program.

J. Edward Jones of New York, listed as the representative of Gov. Laffoon of Kentucky, declared a majority of those present refused to sanction such a program, put forward by representatives of the major oil companies. He said it would have provided for production under the level of ordinary consumption in order to use up present surpluses.

Jones said the Texas representatives, including J. R. Martin, president of the independent petroleum producers of the state, and C. V. Terrell and E. O. Thompson of the Texas railroad commission, had opposed the plan.

John B. Elliott of Los Angeles, who bolted the oil producers' meeting at the Mayflower hotel, late tonight said in a statement:

Delay Test Flow.

Declaring they constituted a majority of the Texas railroad commission and that their decision would stand, Terrell and Thompson announced today that the proposed two hour test flow from 10,000 east Texas oil wells would be delayed from Monday until Thursday, and that there would be a total shutdown thereafter.

Lon A. Smith, another member of the Texas railroad commission, announced in Houston last night that the commission had suspended its order for tomorrow's test and the shutdown following because of numerous protests. Thompson and Terrell asserted the two hour test to determine the potential capacity of each well through two and one-half inch tubing would be held as planned, but had been delayed at the request of the oil operators.

PLANT VALUES OF GEN. MOTORS WRITTEN DOWN

Drop of 92 Millions Cuts Depreciation.

New York, March 26.—(AP)—A readjustment in the real estate, plant and equipment account of the General Motors corporation to accord with present conditions, is disclosed in the pamphlet report of 1932 issued today.

Surplus real estate, plant and equipment previously carried at cost of $115,491,946, has been adjusted by the corporation to the estimated salvage value of $22,779,411, and the difference of $92,712,535 has been charged against depreciation reserve. The effect of this has been to reduce plant account from $592,694,766 to $499,982,231, with a corresponding reduction in depreciation reserve from $264,421,021 to $171,708,486.

Depreciation Charges Lowered.

With the reduction of salvage value, the corporation, says the report, will be enabled to reduce depreciation charges by approximately $7,000,000 annually.

Net earnings from 1932 operations, as previously reported, amounted to $164,979, or 9 cents a preferred share, compared with $87,501,208, or $2.01 a share on the common stock, in 1931.

The corporation on Dec. 31, 1932, held cash, United States government and other marketable securities amounting to $172,780,695, compared with $205,029,119 at the close of the previous year. Net working capital was $225,437,194, against $273,915,923 at the end of 1931. Total current assets were $283,258,974, against $358,502,579, with current liabilities at $57,821,680, against $84,586,656.

Better Position in Industry.

In the three years of the depression, said President Alfred P. Sloan Jr. in his remarks to stockholders, the corporation increased its share of the passenger car business in the United States from 32.8 per cent in 1929 to 41.5 per cent in 1932, operated without a loss in any year, and disbursed $342,114,279 in dividends.

As to the future Sloan said it was not only reasonable to assume "but to expect with certainty that when the period of readjustment is over the automotive industry will not only maintain its position as the world's most important industry but its rate of recovery will be accelerated by the depreciation and obsolescence of existing equipment which has taken place during the years of subnormal production."

6 MORE ILLINOIS BANKS TO REOPEN; 2 AT HARVARD

Edward J. Barrett, state auditor, yesterday authorized the reopening of six more state banks on an unrestricted basis. The banks, which will open today, are:

CARLINVILLE—Farmers and Merchants State bank.

JAMAICA—Jamaica State bank.

NEWMAN—First State Bank of Newman.

WAGGONER—State Bank of Waggoner.

This makes a total of 309 banks which have been examined and authorized to reopen since the banking holiday by the state auditor. Mr. Barrett's office states that examination of the other state banks still closed is being carried on as rapidly as possible.

FINANCE CORP. LOANS BY U. S. PASS 2 BILLION

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 26.—[Special.]—Loans from the Reconstruction Finance corporation have now passed the half way mark on the corporation's total resources.

A summary of operations during the year and a month the federal agency has been in existence disclosed today that actual cash disbursements to all classes of borrowers totaled $2,083,750,079 on March 21. The corporation went into operation on Feb. 2 a year ago with assets of 2 billion dollars which were later increased to 3 billion 800 million.

Record of Outlay.

Loans by the secretary of agriculture to farmers for crop loans in 1932 from funds furnished him by the R. F. C.: $ 65,945,620

To the secretary of the treasury for purchase of stock of home loan banks.... 29,920,000

By the R. F. C. to banks and financial institutions 1,700,427,311

By the R. F. C. to aid in financing "self-liquidating" projects 19,682,000

By the R. F. C. to states for relief purposes 186,275,744

By the R. F. C. to finance "orderly marketing" of agricultural products..... 1,647,572

By the regional agriculture credit corporations to farmers 79,851,830

To secretary of agriculture by 1932 crop loan borrowers.....$ 19,339,508

To R. F. C. by borrowers under section 201 [d]..... 347,079

To the cash disbursements the corporation pointed out, must be added an additional $435,618,152 representing the amount committed to the call of borrowers but not yet drawn. The total of authorizations, including disbursements was $2,695,085,681.

Many Loans Canceled.

An aggregate of $136,825,576, the corporation reported, has been canceled to date by borrowers to whom loans have been authorized but who found them unnecessary.

The summary disclosed that although $186,275,744 has been authorized by the corporation to be loaned for construction projects designed to give employment only $19,862,000 has been actually advanced. Among the advances in cash were loans to $2,327,000 for a new water pumping station in Chicago and $50,000 for a new waterworks in the village of Wilmette, Ill.

"In the case of the other commitments to finance the construction of self-liquidating projects," the corporation stated, "the purchase of bonds is awaiting request by the borrower, the working out of legal details, the taking by applicants of action necessary to authorize issuance of their bonds, and other similar prerequisites to actual advancement of funds."

ASSERTS 5 DAY WEEK WOULD HIT STATE INDUSTRY

Hammond Foresees Loss in Employment.

Thomas S. Hammond, president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, yesterday declared a compulsory five day week would seriously curtail earnings of Illinois factories and reduce employment. A hearing on the bill to provide a five day week for factories and all other occupations excepting farmers, domestics, and governmental employes will be held before the state senate committee on industrial affairs Wednesday.

"The bill would deprive Illinois industry of elasticity of operation essential to many lines of industry which have been necessarily seasonal in character," Mr. Hammond said. "Wholesalers, jobbers, and consumers are buying on a hand to mouth basis. This necessitates flexibility in operation of factories in order that they may fill their orders in time to compete with other states.

Must Work Fast.

"No allowances are made in the bill for certain industries, including canning, and other food producers, where brevity of the season and the perishable nature of the product forces the employment of skilled workers during rush periods without restriction as to the number of days a week.

"A serious hardship, if not commercial disaster, would be enforced upon innumerable lines of industry where employment conditions are largely determined by the flow of orders, which, in turn, are dependent upon the buying habits of consumers, largely regulated by seasons. Neither manufacturers nor the law can regulate how and when the consumer will buy."

Would Contract Employment.

Mr. Hammond said the proposed measure would substitute for the natural, orderly shortening of hours of labor, which is now steadily taking place, an arbitrary contraction of employment. The arbitrary action, he said, would produce a chaotic effect upon economic conditions of the state and demoralize employment, prices, wages, and production costs.
